Golda Meir Dies at 80

JERUSALEM — Former Prime Minister Golda Meir, the first lady of Israeli politics, died today in a Jerusalem hospital at the age of 80.

The immediate cause of death was not announced, but a hospital official said Mrs. Meir had suffered from malignant lymphoma, a cancer of the blood, for more than a decade.

Mrs. Meir died after more than three months in Hadassah Hospital. She had been released for the high Jewish holidays in October, but re-entered the hospital for the last time Oct. 29.

At first it was reported she was suffering from back trouble caused by a slipped disc, then that she had developed a viral infection and was being treated for jaundice — a liver condition in which bile pigments enter the blood and cause yellowing of body parts.

A hospital spokesman said details of her illness would not be discussed until after the end of the Jewish sabbath Saturday.

As prime minister and head of the Labor party in 1969-74, she was the most prominent woman in Israel's public life. She led the country through the Arab-Israeli war of 1973 and peace moves afterward with Egypt and Syria that involved partial Israeli withdrawals in Sinai and on the Golan Heights. ESSENTIAL SERVICE ACT FOR SCHOOLS

Strike Curbs Widening?

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Labor Minister Allan Williams tabled in the legislature today a bill that will not only end the labor dispute which has shut West Kootenay schools but could designate education as an essential service in B.C.

The legislation orders an end within 48 hours to the strike-lockout which has closed schools and Selkirk College in the West Kootenays.

But if the West Kootenay Schools Collective Bargaining Assistance Act passes in its present form, municipalities, regional districts, universities, colleges, vocational institutes and schools as far as they affect education could be added to the Essential Services Disputes Act.

Up until now, essential services have only been construed as those affecting life and limb situations involving police and fire departments.

Any move to broaden the legislation to include educational facilities is sure to cause a storm of controversy in the ranks of labor.

Williams said, however, that section may never be proclaimed.

He is currently awaiting a report from senior labor department officials who are investigating areas that should be included in essential services.

Williams said the inclusion of educational facilities as an essential service won't come about unless the report determines that such a move is necessary.

NDP leader Dave Barrett, however, said he is extremely concerned that the potential to expand the essential services legislation is included in the new bill.

Barrett said the NDP feels the government's move is the first step to imposing right-to-work conditions across the province.

He charged Premier Bill Bennett used the West Kootenay dispute as a cover to recall the legislature to enact "sledgehammer legislation" that will be as effective as right-to-work legislation.

"What this really is, is the first step to destroying the collective bargaining pro-

NEXT DAY DELIVERY NOW DEAD LETTER

By RON CLINGEN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — If not officially dead, the post office's assured next-day delivery service is definitely dying. Postmaster General Gilles Lamontagne admitted Thursday.

The minister told the Commons the program was indeed being phased out, although he insisted it had not been cancelled, after NDP Leader Ed Broadbent — armed with a copy of Thursday's Ottawa Journal — demanded an explanation.

Broadbent noted that the newspaper report said the assured 24-hour service was killed 18 months ago after officials realized it didn't work. But the public was never told.

"Due to volume and different matters, we know now that we cannot give the 24-hour service in all cases," Lamontagne said as he attempted to explain his department's action, or lack of action.

His bid to justify the silent withdrawal of the service continued:

"Instead of lying to the community and the people, we say that we will pick it up. When we can and when we have priority, in many ways we can provide 24-hour delivery, but in certain circumstances we cannot."

Later Lamontagne said, "the program is not cancelled — it is just phasing out."

As opposition MPs jeered, the minister blurted, "Okay, it is."

... So Mail in Minutes

TORONTO (CP) — The world's first completely electronic mail service will be set up between Toronto and Montreal in February. Bell Canada and Ivor Kaye and Associates Inc. of Toronto announced Thursday.

The new system, Fascal, will be expanded to Vancouver, Calgary and Ottawa later.

For 98 cents a page, the system will guarantee transmission of a standard-sized letter within two hours. The express service, which sends a page in 15 minutes, will cost $1.35 a page. Overnight delivery will be 70 cents a page.

Eventually, agents will be placed in shopping malls and offices where letters can be collected or left for automatic transmission.

He said youth in regions such as Cape Breton Island, where jobs are scarce, should "broaden their horizons" and seek jobs in cities such as Toronto.

Cullen accused McGrath in the Commons of taking his remarks out of context and said he was pointing out that one of the strengths of the country is that people can move to get work.

The unemployment insurance legislation is tailored to make about 250,000 persons ineligible for benefits by mid-1981 to save the government about $1.5 billion. It also reduces benefits to all beneficiaries by about 10 per cent.

McGrath asked whether the people who won't qualify for benefits are expected to move to get jobs. With the 15 per cent unemployment rate among persons aged 15 to 24, he said "the young people of this country want to know."

MacEachen said it is desirable and healthy for youth to move but that "our purpose is to attempt to increase economic opportunities in the regions."

He challenged McGrath on grounds it is irregular for an MP to raise questions in the Commons that are based on proceedings in a Commons committee.

3 Killed In Blaze

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Three people died today as a row of shops and a rooming house were destroyed in the second five-alarm fire in the city's old quarter within 24 hours.

Police said the bodies were so badly burned that it was not even possible to tell right away if the victims were men or women.

Lucien Seguin, a fire department official, said the fire started on the ground floor and then spread upward to the rooming house and toward two adjacent buildings.

At least five persons, including one firefighter, were hospitalized for smoke inhalation as the blaze ripped through the area just three blocks away from Notre Dame church, scene of a fire Thursday that caused $2-million damage.

More than 150 firefighters with 25 trucks challenged freezing rain and thick smoke for nearly three hours before bringing the early-morning fire under control.

Two of the injured were found hanging from second-storey windows in an abortive attempt to escape the flames before they were rescued. Another two were saved from the ground floor.

Meanwhile, parish priests at Notre Dame say that an arsonist who tried five times to set fire to historic Notre Dame Church may have been responsible for starting a blaze early Thursday which caused more than $2 million damage to the 150-year-old landmark.

"This time he was successful," said Rev. Rene Marinier, assistant to the Notre Dame parish priest, although fire department officials caution that only a full investigation will conclusively determine the cause of the fire.

Firemen brought the swirling flames under control by mid-morning, saving the church's main structure and most of the parish's religious artifacts.

But an adjacent chapel built in 1890 was heavily damaged.

Truck Wrecks Stores

ST. GEORGES DE BEAUCE, Que. (CP) —

A man driving a heavy armored truck smashed through the walls of rows of shops "as though they were so much butter" and caused as much as $2 million damage in a wild 10-minute escapade, a store manager said.

The destruction took place before opening hours at the Carrefour St. Georges indoor shopping centre, completely demolishing about 25 shops and damaging a number of others, shopping centre manager Roger Bolduc said.

A man in his 20s is in custody.

"I can't imagine how it could have happened so quickly," Bolduc said.

"It was an army truck, about the size of a Brinks truck. I don't know how he got hold of it."

"He managed to avoid hitting any steel columns. That guy knew what he was doing."

Air Trip Probe Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrat MP David Orlikow today asked the government to investigate reports that airline passes have been distributed to public servants in the post office and the Canadian Transport Commission (CTC).

The Winnipeg MP said in the Commons there would be a serious conflict of interest if the reports were true because the departments concerned dealt with airline policies.

Transport Minister Otto Lang and Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne, told Orlikow they had no information on the reports.

The CTC is a federal regulatory agency that makes recommendations to cabinet about transportation policy.

Orlikow said in an interview the passes are reported to have been distributed to officials and their wives for personal use.

Montreal's La Presse reported this week that CTC Vice-President Guy Bergerie said that if the CTC asks airlines for passes, they are not refused. Orlikow said the reports have dealt mainly with passes distributed by CP Air but that other airlines may also be involved.

He said he was concerned about the post office reports because of lucrative air mail contracts that are awarded to the airlines.

ICBC Verdict Next Week

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The results of an investigation into allegations of an attempted "rip-off" by an Insurance Corporation of B.C. claims adjuster in Victoria will be made public next week, a corporation spokesman said today.

Bob Egby said trouble-shooter Jack Scaling, manager of the material damage section in Vancouver, carried out an investigation Thursday into complaints by Karen Lennox and Ian Gilchrist of Sooke that an adjuster had tried to cheat them on a claims settlement.

Egby declined to comment.

"These are very grave charges. We'll have to wait until the report is completed before we can say more."

He said, however, the adjuster has been permitted to remain on the job pending the outcome of the inquiry.

The claim involved Gilchrist's 1976 Ford truck which was extensively damaged in an accident in Sooke Sept. 29.

The couple said just hours after receiving a cheque for $3,400 they overheard the adjuster boast to a friend how he had "taken" Gilchrist for a set of expensive wheels.

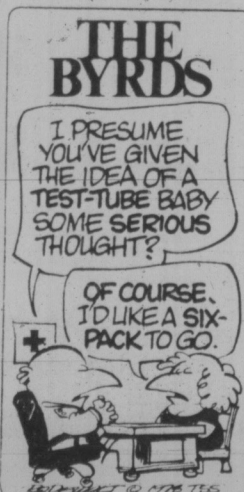

They demanded a review and ICBC subsequently issued another claims cheque for $3,935.

Egby said the truck was written off and taken to the salvage yard on Dunford in Langford where it was picked up on tender for $900 by Jack Evans of Dun Here Auto Body, 2073 Amelia in Sidney.

Evans said Thursday he intends to spend about $2,500 to fix up the truck and then will sell it for $4,000 to $4,500.

Meanwhile, Dennis Coker, NDP MLA for New Westminster and his party's ICBC critic, said today the incident points out a basic weakness in the corporation. "I believe ICBC tends to overlook certain of its shortcomings. It's not as tight as it could be."

Coke said he has received numerous complaints about the way the corporation handles claims but has not been able to substantiate charges of wrongdoing.

Several wrecking firms in Victoria also reported irregularities.

John Harris of Victoria Auto Wreckers said he has heard of cases where cars have been written off and sold without being offered for tender at the salvage yard, a violation of disposal procedures.

He said he's also aware of cases where dealers have bid on wrecks and then discovered a tape deck, or radio or spare tire missing. It's happened to him.

"No one says too much about it. It's just one of those things."

Larry Pollard, part owner of Pollard Automotive, agreed.

"I'm sure lots of that sort of thing goes on. It's the bureaucracy, the paper work that makes it so easily done."

Another dealer said he knew of some adjusters in Victoria who were fired a few years ago for selling parts.

"There's certainly a lot of opportunity to fiddle," he said. "The money going through salvage must be tremendous."

Salvage sales are held when ICBC gets 50 or more wrecks. The sales, normally run every other week in Victoria, are supposed to be by tender. Only bonded dealers or licensed auto wreckers are permitted to take part.

Pollard said the competition is tough. There are between 50 to 60 companies eligible to bid.

Harris complained adjusters are writing off too many wrecks. Many could be fixed and at a savings too, he said.

Not all of the wreckers were critical of ICBC.

Barry Irwin of Sandy's Auto Parts said he's never experienced anything underhanded in his dealings with the corporation.

"I can't say I've ever heard of someone being ripped off. There have been no complaints as far as I'm concerned."

Schreyer Selection Widely Welcomed

OTTAWA (CP) — While former Manitoba premier Ed Schreyer felt "slightly overwhelmed" Thursday by his appointment as Canada's 22nd Governor-General, political spokesmen welcomed him to the post with assurances he is the right man for the job.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark said only he was sure the 42-year-old New Democrat "will do a good job." But other spokesmen were more effusive.

Deputy Prime Minister Allan Rock, speaking for Prime Minister Trudeau who was consulting the Queen in London about the selection, described Schreyer's appointment "a manifestation of Canadianism."

Schreyer would be a "vital link between different parts of the country." He spoke French and English fluently and came from pioneer German descendants in his native Manitoba.

During his years as a federal MP — between 1965-69 — Schreyer had been "a vigorous young member," MacEwen told the Commons after formally announcing the appointment. "He has a feeling for all of Canada."

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent, who said he took special delight in welcoming a former NDP premier to the vice-regal position, said Schreyer "has an exemplary reputation for personal integrity and commitment to the common good."

"As a Western Canadian who speaks both official languages but who himself is not of either English or French ancestry, his appointment is an important recognition of our diverse cultural heritage."

Schreyer replaces Gov. Gen. Jules Légaré, who retires Jan. 14.

In a message to his successor, Légaré said he and his wife Gaby extend their "warmest congratulations" to Schreyer and his wife Lily.

"We know from experience that you are taking on a most onerous and demanding task but at the same time the satisfaction of serving one's fellow Canadians has its own rewards."

"Naturally we will do everything we can to assist you as you take up your new duties and we look forward to seeing you both at Rideau Hall very soon."

Former Conservative prime minister John Diefenbaker described the appointment as "an amazing decision. I wish him well."

In Victoria, Premier Bennett said he considers the former Manitoba premier a man "sensitive to the responsibilities of government and, above all, a strong Canadian."

"I believe he can do an outstanding job in this important role."

In Saskatchewan, NDP

Deputy Premier Roy Romanow said the appointment represents a gain for Canada. Romanow said he is particularly pleased because Schreyer has a multicultural background.

That would "go along way" in mending relations between the provinces and federal government.

Saskatchewan Conservative Leader Dick Collier said he wishes Schreyer every success "in helping to unify Canada."

Won't Be Replaced

The post of chief planner will not be filled for the foreseeable future, Murray Glazier, new chairman of the Capital Regional Board, said today.

He was commenting on the resignation of chief planner Peter Hammer, who will leave soon to become a senior partner in a planning firm in Ontario.

"We have a good staff in the planning department and the remaining senior members will share his duties," he said.

"I will recommend to the board that we carry on for the present as it is and defer the appointment of a replacement."

cess in B.C.," the NDP leader said.

He said there is no need for today's emergency session in view of the fact CUPE workers in Nelson showed up for work this morning.

Barrett said the premier set a course to try and "sneak in" the legislation but has been exposed.

As well as having to return to work within 48 hours, both sides in the CUPE-school districts dispute will have 30 days with a provincial mediator to hammer out new contracts.

If no solutions are reached, Bill 46 provides for the binding arbitration.

The West Kootenay dispute which involves 250 CUPE workers and school districts in Trail, Nelson, Castlegar and Grand Forks as well as Selkirk College is well into its seventh week.

About 14,000 students have been affected by the dispute with a number of schools being closed and others offering reduced services mainly because of the lack of heat.

The bulk of the bill deals with the West Kootenay problem, but a small section at the end opens up the area of essential services.

It would amend the Essential Services Disputes Act to cover areas within the acts jurisdiction which could create "a substantial disruption in the delivery of educational services."

To effect that expansion it would include in the act employers that could be involved in education.

Before the house opened the NDP indicated that if the proposed legislation was an ad hoc bill covering only the West Kootenay dispute it would likely receive smooth passage through the legislature.

But now that it involves essential services it appears Bill 46 is in for considerable debate although the Socred majority ensures eventual passage.

Errors Detailed

Victoria Ald. Robin Blencoe said today two errors appeared in his list of stores offering discounts for goods or services to senior citizens.

Blencoe released the list earlier this week to assist senior citizens in their Christmas shopping.

Blencoe said that Richard's Beauty Salon, of Woodwards, was incorrectly included in the list in place of Raymond Salons of Mayfair.

Raymond Salons offers a discount to senior on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

Cardin Takes On Peking With Clothes a la Mode

TOKYO (UPI) — French fashion designer Pierre Cardin is organizing a fashion show and sending six Parisian models to China to persuade the Chinese to discard their drab Mao uniforms, Japan's Kyodo News Agency reported from Peking today.

Cardin was quoted as saying he believes the Chinese will gradually shift to Western clothes over the next 10 years.

"I will not make grotesque clothes like they wear in China at present," Cardin told a news conference at a Peking Hotel. "My intention is to tell the Chinese: 'This is what world fashions are like.' The Chinese understand that if they use my sewing patterns, they can create top mode fashions."

Cardin, who has been in China since Nov. 30, said he had been asked by Chinese authorities to organize two shows that would be held simultaneously March 22 in Peking and Shanghai.

He said he will design the clothes for the shows himself when he returns to Paris. They will be made from materials purchased during his current tour of Peking, Tientsin and Canton, including cotton, silk and cashmere.

The gray suits favored by the late Chairman Mao Tse-Tung were the uniform of the day for both sexes after the 1949 communist revolution.

Since Mao's death in 1976 there have been a few signs of change.

The clothing worn by the five Chinese women who accompanied Vice Premier Teng Hsiao-Ping on his official visit to Japan in October looked more like well tailored Western-style pants suits than old Mao uniforms.

Several of the women appeared in bright, multi-colored jackets during their stay in Tokyo.

Mrs. Chiao Ling, wife of the Chinese ambassador to Japan, wore simple Western style dresses for the occasion, as did some of the women attached to the Chinese embassy staff.

Iran Rebels Burn U.S. Plant

Times News Services
TEHRAN — Anti-American demonstrators in Isfahan today bombed an American apartment complex and burned down the Grumman Aircraft Corp. headquarters as the U.S. Air Force flew families of American servicemen out of Iran.

No injuries were reported in the fire or the explosion. In an effort to defuse mounting opposition to his 38-year-old regime, the shah lifted a martial law ban on religious processions during the high holy days of Moharram.

Diplomats in Isfahan, 800 miles south of Tehran, said a bomb exploded in the underground parking garage of an apartment complex where "four or five" American families lived.

Later, several thousand demonstrators surrounded the headquarters of Grumman, which employs 100 Americans in Iran.

In Washington, remarks by President Carter were interpreted as suggesting for the first time Thursday that the shah of Iran may not survive that country's continuing upheaval and offered his sharpest criticism yet of the shah's record on human rights.

However, White House and State Department officials said later that the administration still supported the shah and that Carter's remarks did not represent any dramatic shift of U.S. policy toward Iran.

President Carter is "quite concerned" about the reports, said press secretary Jody Powell, who disclosed that the State Department was preparing a statement to reaffirm the present policy of support.

Yule Doll Branded Bottom Of Barrel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A consumer group Thursday gave its Christmas toy "booby prize of the year" award to what it called a new low in technology — a doll designed to develop diaper rash.

The ratings were made by the Consumer Affairs Committee of Americans for Democratic Action which conducted a price and quality survey of Christmas toys in the Washington area.

The booby prize went to "Baby Wet-n-Care," a blond doll which breaks out in diaper rash after the child mixes orange colored tablets with water and feeds it the solution. There is also a second lotion solution to remove the rash.

"I just can't imagine a child wanting a toy that gets a pink mess on her rear end," said Ann Brown, head of the group. In addition, she said, the process "makes rather a dangerous precedent" by introducing children to pill popping, even though the tablets are non-toxic.

She also complained the whole idea is "not biologically sound" and takes a near-chemist to mix the ingredients properly.

Cold enough to freeze the bolts off a brass hydrant. That's what it has been this week in Prince George. To compensate against the cold, this hydrant, painted as part of a summer works project, has been outfitted with suitable clothing. No, the toque and scarf are not part of a winter works program.

A New Governor-General

One of the best-kept secrets of recent Canadian political history was the appointment of Manitoba opposition leader Ed Schreyer as the country's new governor-general. News of the appointment, when it came Thursday, was as great a bombshell to Manitobans, NDPers and other political observers as it was to ordinary citizens who claim no special political insight. Schreyer's name had not been whispered from backroom boy to backroom boy; it had not even made the Ottawa gossip circuit which usually picks up such tidbits as quickly as a magnet picks up iron filings.

Yet on examination the appointment is not so surprising. It has long been known that a strong mutual respect developed between Schreyer and Prime Minister Trudeau during their eight years of federal-provincial conferences together. More than once rumors circulated in Manitoba that Schreyer would drop out of provincial politics to accept a high quasi-nonpolitical federal appointment (the chairmanship of the National Energy Board was sometimes mentioned).

Instead Trudeau — in what he knows will probably be one of the last major appointments he will make — has given his old friend the most prestigious job in all the country.

Schreyer has some qualifications that should make him good for the job. He is a western Canadian, born and bred; he is an anglophone but not from the traditional WASP background; he is young for a governor-general (he'll be 43 when he takes over the post next month); his political background has been entirely with the NDP which gives the lie to the idea that correct old school tie connections are necessary to obtain such jobs.

Undoubtedly these characteristics will combine to ensure that, whatever else Schreyer does, he will bring a fresh outlook to Rideau Hall. Although the current governor-general, Jules, Leger, and his wife have won universal respect and admiration in their time in office, a change of outlook every few years can only be good.

If a doubt is to be raised about the appointment, it must focus on the nearness of Schreyer to the political scene. Essentially he will move directly from being a highly partisan participant in one of the most polarized provinces in Canada to what should be the most non-partisan job in the country.

Politicians have received vice-regal appointments before but usually there has been at least a short break between their partisan participation and their new duties. It is not a matter only of helping the politician to draw back from the day-to-day political battles; it is a matter also of helping the public to have confidence that the appointee will be as strictly non-partisan as it is possible for a human to be.

Schreyer will have to work doubly hard during his first while in office to convince the public of that.

We wish him the best of luck and offer our congratulations.

Saanich Super-committee

Saanich Mayor Mel Couveller undoubtedly had the best of intentions when he moved this week to create a super-committee of council to deal with policy and long term planning.

Couveller spent his first year as mayor watching his council squabble incessantly over the most mundane issues rather than make real progress in dealing with some of the key issues such as the community plan. It is little wonder he wanted to create a new structure that he hoped would improve the functioning of council.

But in the words of the old proverb, it is not the road to heaven that is paved with good intentions, and Couveller is likely to find he has created a monster that he cannot control and that will produce far more problems than it will solve.

First, the committee consists of the mayor, three aldermen and three senior staff members, all of whom have equal votes. It is quite unprecedented for staff members to have votes on a committee which has as its main goal the drawing up of long term goals and policies for a municipality.

Couveller said he wants to know what staff members think about issues. A laudable idea, no doubt, but would it not be much more appropriate just to ask them? Under Couveller's system, three staff members plus a single elected official could outvote the other three elected officials on major issues — surely a perversion of the democratic process.

Second, the committee will always meet in private. Matters so important as long term planning for a municipality should not be drawn up by a group hidden away from the glare of public scrutiny. Also, the closed meetings will be subject to abuse: with the committee consisting of the undisputed leaders of the two factions on council, it may well prove much more comfortable for them to thrash out all contentious issues in private rather than struggle through them in full view of the citizenry.

Couveller wants to give his new system a six-month trial. Regrettably, we think even that is too long for a structure that could so damage the proper democratic decision-making process.

Ads Controversy for PQ

QUEBEC — The opposition calls it "brainwashing" and the "selling of separatism."

The government calls it "informing the public."

But no matter which side of the political fence one is on, advertising by the Quebec government has become a hot political topic since the Parti Quebecois came to power two years ago.

Under the PQ government advertising has been increasing at a galloping rate. In its first year in power, the PQ government spent 67 per cent more on advertising than did the Liberal government in the preceding year.

Unofficial statistics compiled over the last two years show the Quebec government and its agencies have spent $25 million in advertising — more than any other provincial government. And this figure does not include advertising expenditures by Quebec crown corporations.

Big Spender

Quebec is among the top 15 advertising purchasers in the country. The federal government is the nation's biggest purchaser of advertising.

But it's the message in the ads that has riled Quebec's opposition Liberal party.

Liberal MNA Michel Graton says government ads are being used to "condition the population to vote yes in the referendum" on Quebec's sovereignty. He claims the ads have "a clearly partisan and ultranationalist odor."

Communications Minister Louis O'Neill says there is nothing wrong with ads expressing pride in Quebec, but the Liberals feel the ad campaign is a carefully designed plan to reach the subconscious mind of Quebec voters.

Consider these examples: The slogan chosen to publicize last summer's Quebec "national" holiday (Heritage Week and St. Jean Baptiste Day) was "the Quebec est en fleurs" or "Quebec is blossoming."

The song accompanying the government's auto insurance ad campaign began "Dans ce Quebec qui est la notre" meaning "in this Quebec which belongs to us."

The government campaign for use of car seat belts used the clever slogan: "Tout le monde s'attache au Quebec." On the surface this translates as

"everybody is buckling up in Quebec" but it also means "everybody identifies with Quebec."

Other ads seek to portray the Quebec government as a paternalistic caretaker for its citizens such as the auto insurance board slogan "Quebec — la personne avant toute chose" ("In Quebec — people come first").

"Over the last two years we have witnessed an orgy of government advertising that is without precedent in any democratic government in the western world," says Liberal MNA Andre Marchand.

"These nationalistic slogans, paid for by the taxpayer, are being used for and keep the environment clean; even to remind parents about physical education courses for their children.

Some $800,000 was spent on an anti-smoking and good nutrition campaign but the ads were in French only, prompting one Liberal official to scoff: "The government doesn't care if the anglophones die off."

And rather than using "le gouvernement du Quebec," the Levesque government has taken to calling itself "le gouvernement Quebecois" — an obvious association with Parti Quebecois.

"Starting an ad campaign has become the fashionable thing to do in every government department," says communications ministry spokesman Camille Rony. "You should see how many proposals we get."

Ms. Rony admits candidly that some of the best "Quebec nationalist" ads "come from the federalist ad agencies."

"It seems that capitalism is more important to them than federalism. They know exactly what we want."

New System Started

Ads paid with PQ party funds stress Quebec's national identity. "Quebec — it can be done," says one radio jingle. "All our dreams can be realized."

A complaint of the Liberal opposition is that patronage has taken root in government advertising, despite new measures to reform the awarding of contracts.

The PQ government instituted a system of public tenders and juries to ensure that contracts would not be awarded to the same few advertising firms, as occurred under the Bourassa government.

But the Liberals wonder why one particular company, Cossette et Associes, keeps winning more than its share of contracts. They say the company has become "the Pequist house agency."

But although Cossette et Associes did record business of almost $3 million with the PQ government in 1977-78, the company received only 11 per cent of government contracts.

Statistics show that during the last three years of the Bourassa administration, the firm of Pierre Tremblay Publicite enjoyed 45 per cent of government business — the same company handling election campaign ads for the Liberals.

... nothing wrong in it

strictly partisan purposes by the political party which gave birth to this subtle, brainwashing government."

PQ members have rebuffed such criticism by charging that the federal government is spending millions "to save Canadian unity."

Yet the breadth of the Quebec government campaign is considerable at a time of economic restraint. Spokesmen say the ads are necessary to explain the many social reforms enacted by the government under its "good government" mandate.

There have been campaigns to explain the French language charter (Bill 101); to promote the purchase of Quebec products; to conserve energy

Too Commercial

More than once as the rainy month of November came to a close, I heard people of different ages and lifestyle making comments about Christmas: the too early decorations, the high prices, the crowded stores, the steady advertising and so on and on.

Of course, the so-called jolly season and all the merry go round will not last forever, thank goodness. But we cannot blame the merchants, the press, the radio and television announcers who are telling us that the more we spend the more we save, if the incessant talk about presents, gifts, turkeys get "on our nerves." We have brought all this upon ourselves and the Christmas season has grown longer and bigger every year. What was once a happy gathering of families and friends around a modest tree and a table with a few extra "goodies" has now grown into an elaborate ritual that leaves us very tired, with empty wallets and a stack of bills to start 1979.

The time for rejoicing being soon over, we will again walk along the path of uncertainty, unrest, some unhappiness throughout the long and dreary winter ahead. But we can only blame ourselves for having forgotten the meaning of moderation and old-fashioned common sense. We really don't need very extravagant and elaborate celebrations to be happy. We can have a lovely, friendly, warm Christmas, the value of which is not measured in dollars and cents. Or, even better, we can get away from it all and be the masters of ourselves instead of the dumb sheep of over-commercialized propaganda. — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

What a Day!

I am originally from Canada — from Montreal and lived one year in Vancouver, but for the past 25 years have lived in Santa Barbara, Calif.

I was in Victoria Nov. 17-21 visiting friends and found the weather delightful and admired the snow-capped mountains and clear skies. My friend and I took the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway dayliner from Victoria to Nanaimo. The trip was one that I will always remember. It was so scenic, the train was so comfortable and the cost was so little. We took the train back the same day and we really enjoyed both trips.

I heard that they were having some difficulty keeping the E & N in operation. I hope they will always have it as it is a treat for tourists and for the inhabitants of Vancouver Island. What a beautiful way to spend a day! — Mrs. James B.D. Barrett, Santa Barbara, California.

A New Park

An alternative idea for the Interurban area that is proposed — namely a real park with trees, birds and flowers! Not blacktop and cement and noise pollution!

This could extend west from the present boundary of Layritz Park. Some control would be needed in the flood plain along the creek, with creation of pools. And to enhance the area with a planting of trees, such as poplar and birch which are suited to this kind of location. To be enjoyed by all citizens and to be a show place.

During winter there are waterfowl and even swans were seen among the geese this past winter. Plant vegetation, grains, etc. to encourage the migrating birds to possibly stay over.

Maybe it could be a project nurtured by the various organizations concerned with preservation of natural wildlife and forestry areas, bird-watchers and nature lovers. I am sure there are many individuals who would be willing to subscribe towards this goal, either with their time or/and money, to make such a thought possible in fact, for the betterment of all people and a lasting monument to those of us who really care — Mrs. Howard N. Davis, 4578 Hughes Road.

Tour buses need to be owned locally, to benefit Victoria.

On the Buses

A recent article (Priority in Hiring for City Drivers; Times, Nov. 28) quoting Mr. Cedergren of Grayline of Seattle Inc., the new owners of the local Gray Line tours, stressed the sale of package tours to Americans wishing to visit Victoria. The idea is excellent and should have been pursued long ago. After all, our local economy depends on the influx of tourists — providing they spend money here. That is where you will lose.

Don't think for a moment that package tours sold by Americans, to Americans and in American cities are going to fill your pockets. The visitors will see Victoria all right — busing past your establishments by the thousands with possibly a half hour downtown to rush into the museum or lobby of the Empress.

Many will likely be whisked into the suburbs and will visit Butchart's Gardens. Then, as quickly as possible, they'll be whisked away across the water to spend that money in American hotels, American restaurants and American stores, and a mere pittance will have been left in Victoria. And really, why should the operators be the least concerned about our economy? Business is dog-eat-dog and the actual beauty of Victoria is free and can be milked very quickly.

This is being done already with the operation of the Princess Marguerite. If... the ship arrives here on time, the passengers have, at best, the grand total of four hours to see Victoria, let alone spend any money here. Those who have purchased sightseeing tours of Victoria are lucky if they are back in time to stroll (rather than run) back to the ship for the return to Seattle. Of the 1,500 or so passengers, you can count the number of suitcases of those who intend to stay here on one hand.

They are able to eat both brunch and supper on the ship. However, many people do have a doughnut and coffee while on shore. Can you survive on the doughnut and coffee trade? The money spent on the ship likely just pays for its operation so we are enticing Americans here just to show off our beauty. Maybe the idea is that they'll fall in love with us and return. Don't count on it.

It is incredible that the Marguerite appears to be run for the benefit of Seattle merchants. Anyone leaving from Victoria has to stay overnight in a Seattle establishment. If scheduled in reverse, those tourists would have to leave at least a few dollars here. They might even stay a day or so and visit your places of business as well as leisurely enjoying our city.

Think about it Mr. Businessperson. You don't want American Grayline package tours. You need Canadian-initiated tours which will benefit you, then you can call the shots. Isn't it about time you organized right here in Victoria instead of waiting for foreign interests to take over and deal you out? If there is no transportation service available for the passengers from the Alaska cruise vessels, it might be decided that they bypass Victoria — and similarly for the thousands of Japanese visitors.

By the way, you are our economy and your moves will affect every Victorian — K. Garland, Jr., 3749 Casey Drive.

Lottery Facts

In your article Nov. 29, headlined — McCarthy Denies Lottery Charges, the minister passes this off as nonsense and ludicrous, and accuses Mrs. Daily (NDP) of "creating sheer political fluff. After reading the last part of your article — "The minister said there may be more grants to Social Credit ridings because the people elected more Social Credit MLA's in the last election." — this could be taken as a political bribe or inducement to the people of British Columbia to vote Social Credit.

This way your riding will receive a more favorable consideration for a share of the government lottery funds. Let's have some real accounting for this money which our present government controls and is using to their advantage. If this is not done soon then I suggest a committee of investigation including all parties be set up, to tell us the real facts. — Griff Owens, 31-880 Vernon Avenue.

Shocking News

Last week I released a list of grants made from the lottery fund given to me by Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy. I pointed out that in the miscellaneous grants category, 33 out of 35 grants went to Social Credit ridings. The 33 Social Credit grants total $1.5 million and the two NDP ridings received $100,000.

I was shocked the next day to read in your newspaper a statement from Mrs. McCarthy that "close to $1 million" of the $1.5 million was for a therapeutic pool in Vancouver. That is completely untrue. The $1.5 million is for smaller projects in Social Credit ridings not including any grants in Vancouver or Victoria. Any expenditure on a pool is in addition to the $1.5 million.

It is interesting to note the only pool mentioned in Mrs. McCarthy's list is at Pearson Hospital in Vancouver and it is for $750,000 not "close to $1 million." — Eileen Daily, MLA Burnaby North.

The Right to a Fair Start in Life

In less than 25 words, the Canadian Council on Children and Youth has produced a telling definition of the rights of children. In the midst of its lengthy report on the status of the child in Canada, the council observes that out of our collective zeal to protect our offspring, we have developed a system of laws and attitudes in which "the only right of children is the right to receive from adults the treatment we feel is in their best interests."

In a way, this is nothing more than a statement of the obvious; we live in a world managed, or mismanaged, by adults — and this will always be so. But in another way, the council's observation goes straight to the heart of the matter. Adult society has appointed itself a sort of regent, experimenting with the welfare of children who must be seen and not heard. The problem with this doctrine, as the council suggests, is that it can be and is "invoked indiscriminately. The rationale, 'It's for his own good,' can be dragged out to justify anything from the most gentle affection to the grossest abuse."

Children have no automatic right to independent legal counsel in custody hearings where they are the parties most affected. Under Canadian law, parents and teachers are expressly authorized to use physical force in their dealings with children. In all but two provinces, "illegitimate" children (the adjective says all) have only the scantiest of claims to the estates of their parents. In our adult society, we permit — even encourage — people to marry and bear children, without demanding any assurance that they have the least idea what they're about. And then we simply permit them to get divorced. The children? Well, every break-up has its victims.

The council's report provides statistics. Each year, approximately 50,000 Canadian marriages end in divorce; there are now about 300,000 one-parent families in Canada; in almost 260,000 of these, the parent is a woman; most one-parent families dwell in poverty, especially if they are led by a woman; in 1973, the number of pre-school-age children of one-parent families exceeded by nearly 300 per cent the total number of places in Canadian day-care facilities.

Add it all up, toss in alcoholism, don't forget the effects of domestic strain on two-parent families, consider the special cultural problems of native Canadians, and bear in mind antiquated federal and provincial child welfare legislation. The results are appalling.

Canada ranks seventh of 16 developed countries in infant life expectancy. Twenty-seven per cent of first-time admissions to psychiatric institutions and 10 per cent of suicides occur at 19 years of age or younger. Last year, 80,000 Canadian children were found to be in need of protection by provincial child welfare agencies; not all of them received it. Many others, requiring protection, went undetected.

In recent months, many provinces in Canada have embarked upon reform of child welfare legislation. However important, however welcome these reforms may be, they do not — they cannot — go straight to the heart of the matter. So long as children are born, willy-nilly, into suffering, then we shall be spending vast amounts of time, energy and money merely to moderate the damage that has already been done.

If children can be said to have rights, then surely their fundamental entitlement is the right to a fair start on life. This cannot be assured in dribs and drabs. Perhaps we must re-examine, perhaps in fundamental ways, our views concerning the nature of the family and the manner in which we are going about the business of civilization.

Admittance Restricted, the report of the Canadian Council on Children and Youth, has underscored the need.

Time of Trouble For the Unions

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — October's Atlantic magazine and December's Harper's contain a pair of essays that stimulate comparative politics.

A.H. Raskin in Atlantic covers the inexorable weakening of the American labor movement, particularly in printing and communications, by computer technology.

Nicholas von Hoffman in Harper's traces the real decline (not simply a relative decline) in numbers, power and influence of the organized labor movement in this decade. While there's some hyperbole in his article, "The Last Days of the Labor Movement," the evidence presented is disturbing to any member or friend of trade unionism. What happens in the U.S. usually happens here after a lag.

We've not had the clear decline in union membership yet nor have our unions covering public service employees at all levels of government been beaten back so badly in Canada. We've even seen the emergence in the past month or two of a strident and united unionism in this country.

It's upset about the co-ordinated determination of senior governments to put the lid on public-service wages and salaries and to keep it on, and even to cut back on the generosity of pension provisions.

This labor war against legislation and for the support of the public is in an earlier stage and more clear-cut than it has been in the U.S. In the short run of the next few years, it seems certain unionism in the public service is unlikely to have either bargaining or organizing triumphs.

Von Hoffman sketches the tiredness of big labor's leadership in the U.S., its reluctance for grand fights or tackling issues with a strong element of liberal ideas or social gospel. He also reviews the substantial power and the many outlets for anti-labor interests. They've helped make the larger unions synonyms for dishonesty, featherbedding and backwardness.

A Canadian is tempted to argue comparisons give way to contrasts because of the openly different stances of American and Canadian unionism toward participation in party politics.

Dennis McDermott, the head of the Canadian Labor Congress, in his campaign for more involvement of unions in the New Democratic Party, seems to emphasize the contrast with the U.S. At this stage, there's little evidence one way or the other whether he's a real Pied Piper for a swarming union presence in party politics.

It's fair, however, to say he hasn't yet put together a mass following for his views among the six million union members in Canada.

Barbara Frum is best known for her work on the CBC radio program "As It Happens." She tells me she and "those associated with her" have been injured by my remarks in a recent column.

This is unfortunate. I regret it very much. My conclusion, jumped to from evidence in a magazine article, was wrong.

Frum is not "an active, capital 'L' Liberal." She has never been active in any political party. She did not persuade Doris Anderson (the former Chatelaine editor) to run for the Liberals in the Eglington by-election Oct. 15. She contributed nothing to the Liberal party's work in that campaign. She has not been associated in any political way with the senior Liberal personalities, Senator Keith Davey and James Coutts.

She is a non-political person, she tells me, as befits her nature and her journalistic role.

How Many Tourists Can a Canyon Take?

THE ECONOMIST

One of the seven natural wonders of the world, a slice from top to bottom of geological history, the Grand Canyon is a short flight from Las Vegas or a hard day's drive from Los Angeles. It is the attraction that most Americans say they would like to visit, and with Mr. Laker's skytrain service to Los Angeles, it is within reach of European tourists. But can it take any more admirers?

The question is fiercely controversial in the American southwest. The national park service, which manages the Grand Canyon national park, is caught between contradictory mandates: to preserve the wilderness and to make it accessible to the public. Already, although the canyon park covers more than a million acres, the park service places such tight restrictions on the number of camp sites and hotel rooms that thousands of people are turned away on a summer's day. The service is even more niggardly about the numbers permitted to "run the river" — to make the passage along the ice-green Colorado River at the canyon's floor.

Yet the Sierra Club, America's most militant and well-heeled conservation group, wants tougher limits still. A year ago the club (dramatically filing in the name of the Grand Canyon itself) sued the park service for mismanaging the river trips through the canyon — letting in too many people in noisy boats, causing damage to the river, its beaches, banks and its wildlife. The club wants all boats with motors to be kept out.

The dispute may ultimately have to be settled by the secretary of the interior, Cecil Andrus. Last month, however, the club won a minor round when the federal district court in Phoenix, Arizona, dismissed a counter action for damages by one of the commercial river runners, whose business would be hurt by a motor ban. There are 22 companies holding commercial licences for river trips, and they make up a strong local lobby in Arizona. Thus most of the state's politicians are fighting to straddle both sides.

Senator Barry Goldwater, a keen outdoorsman, first ran the Colorado through the Canyon in 1940. Before 1963 hardly 100 people had done so. But when the Glen Canyon Dam in Utah opened in 1964, it made the flow of water in the Colorado more regular and the Canyon more navigable. At the same time, the public developed a taste for wilderness. By 1973 15,000 people a year were making the trip in inflatable rubber boats and the park service moved in to restrict traffic to an annual limit of 13,000.

Running the Colorado is neither easy, quick nor cheap. From the starting point, at Lee's Ferry just below the Utah border, to the end just above Lake Mead, the journey is 277 miles long. It takes a minimum of six days, at an average cost of $600 a person. Along the way there is no exit, except by hiking out — an uphill trek of 15 hours. Within the gorge, temperatures are extreme. The air can reach 130 degrees in summer while the river stays at 50 degrees — too cold and fast for swimming.

Careful as they are, the overnight camps made by the boat parties pollute the river, especially with what are called, in masterly bureaucratic jargon, "human waste burial sites". The park service has now banned the use of soap along the Colorado (but permits it on the tributaries). This summer, for the first time, the park banned open fires along the river bank and insisted that riverboat operators, like astronauts, should haul all human waste back home in containers.

If the department of the interior approves, the park service will meet the rising demand for river trips by raising the annual limit to 13,000, but also spacing them out more thinly by expanding the season from three to six months of the year. It also hopes to phase out motor boats, but gradually.

Most visitors to the Grand Canyon get nowhere near the river. Of the 20,000 passing through the park gates on an average day, most head for Grand Canyon Village, on the south rim, with its seven lodges, fast food and small hospital. The harder minority go to the less accessible north rim, which offers the most dramatic of all canyon views.

But on the rims too, the park service has adopted a no-growth policy. There will be no expansion beyond the present 800 hotel rooms or 3,000 camp sites, and no rationing by price either. At $3 a day for a camp site and $35 a day for a hotel room plus bath, for a family of four, the park's accommodation is a bargain — for those who plan early enough to get in.

There are some unusual problems. The burros that graze on the lower reaches of the canyon, for example, are a bigger threat to the environment than the tourists are. The animals are not indigenous — 19th century prospectors brought them in — and they are stripping the vegetation and drinking the water needed by other wildlife. Yet the only way to get rid of them is to shoot them — and public opinion will not stand that.

And if someday there is a backlash against conservation, as the park managers fear, the park service could well be taken to court and charged with preserving the wilderness solely for the healthy and young, shutting out the tired, the pregnant, the old and the small.

A Wasted Youth

As a child, I mastered the multiplication tables. It was a waste of time. The pocket calculator came along. A skill I had spent several years learning was obsolete. I had wasted some of the sweetest years of my childhood.

As a youth, I learned to do an exceptionally fine slow roll in a propeller airplane. It was a waste of time. The jet airplane came along. It carried 400 persons who wanted to see movies instead of doing slow rolls. A skill of which I was extremely proud was obsolete. I had wasted two years of my youth.

During a bout of unemployment, I rented a typewriter and learned to type. It was a waste of time. The computer terminal came along. You had to know how to get words out of a television screen. People who knew how to type were obsolete. I had wasted years of my life training my left little finger to locate "q" on a keyboard.

Through many years of struggle, I learned to speak English. It was a waste of time. Grunting came along, and in Washington, mumbling. Another skill had become pointless.

Reviewing a wasted past, I feel like my automobile. Under the theory of "built-in obsolescence, this poor machine began to deteriorate by dropping its windshield-wiper knob to the floor the day I made the final payment on it.

Now nine years old, speckled with rust, clanking and creaking, dropping parts, leaking rain through the windshield, it is the wrong size, the wrong shape and the wrong style. The jokes people make about it are cruelly contemptuous. It is a terrible thing to be obsolete, whether you are a car or a person, yet the constant change with which we all live creates built-in obsolescence among people just as Detroit creates it in cars.

Most people are probably aware, subconsciously, of the perils of obso-

lescence and many people seem to spend great amounts of energy and money in a struggle to defeat them. And with good reason. Who wants to wake up some morning and find that he's being traded in for a new model because his windshield wipers are out of style or because he still does multiplication problems in his head?

This is the fear that sends so many of the most celebrated people crashing into this season's disco parlor and joining the mob scene at this year's vacation resort. It is ominous to be heard discussing last year's book when everybody else has moved on to this year's book, to be the only person in the crowd who missed both Jaws and Star Wars, to be heard speaking English in Washington when everybody else is mumbling, to pull up to the Beverly Hills Hotel in a 1969 Buick speckled with rust when everybody else is driving a Mercedes-Benz.

The gossip branch of the publishing industry is booming just now by satisfying a popular appetite for information about this year's people — what they are wearing, eating and dancing, where they are going, what they are playing and whom they are marrying, divorcing, shooting.

Just as automobile publications keep the masses abreast of the new models in cars, the gossip industry keeps them informed about the new models in people. In the most remote backwater of the country, the American now has a constant stream of intelligence on which to base decisions for avoiding obsolescence.

Periodically the gossip industry declares that this person or that has not undergone a style change since it came on the market two or three years ago and is now obsolete, or "out," to use the word that stalks the nightmares of every season's most successful new people.

Long life among the fanciest new people is a rarity. They become obsolete nearly as fast as new cars. For every Jacqueline Onassis who survives year after year to become a classic like the Stutz or the Reo, thousands are shuffled off annually to the used-people lots and fast rusting.

The question is whether it is wiser to avoid skills that are doomed to obsolescence. To be known as someone who can do a slow roll in a propeller airplane is to be marked as helplessly out of date. To be heard speaking English instead of grunts is to be exposed as quaint, an Essex on a parking lot filled with Maseratis.

But won't learning to dance the hustle lead ultimately to the same fate? Among the many skills I did not acquire while young was the ability to waltz. I have been grateful ever since. As a result, when the music starts nowadays and people rise to quiver at the hips, I am not one of those who ask, "Why don't they ever play a waltz?" Here is one moment in the day when marvelous skills mastered years ago do not exist to remind all humanity of my obsolescence.

I meant to end here with a trenchant remark, but my windshield wiper has just fallen off and I can't see where I was headed. To the junkyard, probably.

Vancouver Island Shelf Survey Slated

Oceanographers will take their first concerted look at the continental shelf off Vancouver Island in a series of surveys that will run through 1979.

Howard Freeland, of the offshore oceanography section at the Institute of Ocean Sciences (IOS), said the work hopefully will allow scientists to map such things as the upwelling phenomenon over four seasons of the year.

Upwelling is the name given to a deep, cold onshore current that rises toward the surface as it nears shore.

Freeland said knowledge of Pacific waters covering the shelf has been based largely on assumptions and limited investigation. With Canadian territorial seas extended to 200 miles it was important to get a more thorough and scientific evaluation.

Sections from IOS to take part in the program starting Jan. 29 will be offshore oceanography, coastal oceanography, tides and currents, and ocean ecology. The first to go out will be a field party from the offshore group, whose efforts will eventually involve the entire 25-man section.

Most of the surveys are expected to take place within 50 miles of the coast, using three ships at various times in the undertaking. CAV Endeavor, research vessel from maritime command; Parizeau, from IOS, and J.B. Read, from Pacific Biological Station, Nanaimo.

Using upwelling as an example, Freeland said the general ocean currents off the west coast had never been scientifically observed although there are obvious implications for fisheries and meteorology.

Upwelling has been studied in detail off the western American coast, the Central and South American coasts and in the Gulf of Alaska, Freeland said.

It is probable that researchers will find weak upwelling off the B.C. coast, where the main Pacific current branches northward along the coast of Vancouver Island and the Queen Charlotte, and southward along the Washington and Oregon coastline, Freeland said.

Off the Peruvian coast, strong Pacific upwelling of cold water in the past has provided abundant plankton to support that country's important anchovy fishery, which has supplied a vast proportion of the world's animal protein.

Recently, through a phenomenon scientists are trying to understand, upwelling weakened with the result that the anchovy fishery declined almost to the point of extinction. It has not yet recovered and a moratorium on fishing is being considered.

As part of their work on the continental shelf off B.C., oceanographers will place four instrument moorings off the mouth of Juan de Fuca Strait to record currents.

Northward to the Brooks Peninsula there will be nine more offshore moorings, two of them weather stations. In Alberni Inlet, where there are three tide meters, two more will be located along with two current meters.

The territory under observation straddles LaPerouse Bank, which as one of the main fishing grounds of west coast fishermen is of special interest to ocean ecology biologists.

YULE LIGHT ALERT

Homeowners were advised today to be modest in their indoor and outdoor decorative Christmas lighting displays to conserve electricity.

T.J. Newton, manager of B.C. Hydro energy conservation divisions, said energy conservation could be achieved by using lower wattage Christmas lights now available on the market. They use about 25 per cent less electricity.

"Standard indoor tree bulbs are obtainable, for example, which are rated at five watts instead of seven," he said.

He also suggested that Christmas lights not be turned on until after supper and off again before bedtime. Tree lights should never be left on when nobody is at home.

Baffin Study Word Awaited

A comprehensive environmental study of northwestern Baffin Bay which will likely involve Victoria researchers awaits a National Energy Board (NEB) decision next month.

Petro-Canada oceanographer Bert Bennett, the Crown corporation's representative at the Institute of Ocean Sciences, told a seminar this week an Arctic pilot project involving the proposed liquefaction of Melville Island natural gas and its movement by tankers will go before the NEB in January.

If the project is approved, surveys will be required before environmental and transport approvals are given.

Although he is attached to the institute at Patricia Bay, Bennett has been working with the Arctic research group whose studies have included the Beaufort Sea and Arctic Archipelago.

Bennett said studies would involve Bridport Inlet, possible gas terminals, shipping route, safety concerns, ice stability, seal pups and the risk of stranding Inuits if ice-breaking tankers isolate offshore hunting parties.

He said two liquefied natural gas tankers had been designed for the transport role, incorporating ice-breaking capability.

Petro-Canada was formed in 1976 as a result of concern in 1973-74 about future supplies and reserves of petroleum resources and a falling-off in Arctic exploration.

Bennett said its mandate was to increase the supply of energy for Canadians, assist the government to form a national energy policy and give Canada a presence in the national and international petroleum industry.

Petro-Canada is involved with Panarctic Oils northern exploration, the Syncrude Canada oil sands project and a proposed Polar Gas pipeline from the Arctic to eastern Canada.

The corporation bought Atlantic Richfield Canada, including 1,000 wells and exploration activities in the Arctic and off Labrador and Nova Scotia.

Alcoholic Judge Gets Paid Leave

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Thursday the provincial cabinet has agreed to an indefinite leave of absence with pay for Erik Bendrodt, an alcoholic provincial court judge.

Bendrodt was the subject of a hearing by the Judicial Council of B.C. last month after he was seen picking up a teen-aged prostitute. His drinking problem was disclosed at the hearing.

The council recommended to cabinet that no further action be taken in the case.

Gardom said the cabinet agreed to a recommendation by chief provincial court judge Lawrence Goulet that Goulet decide when Bendrodt should resume his judicial duties.

"In my view, it is the clear responsibility of the chief judge that he ensure Judge Bendrodt will participate in a recognized treatment program."

The attorney-general also announced that a special committee will advise him on changes to the Provincial Court Act and on what legislation is needed to increase the powers of the judicial council, which now is restricted to recommending dismissal of judges or that no action be taken.

UNIONS UNITED, NEWSPAPER GUILD SAYS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Phil Needham, president of Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper Guild, Thursday rejected a statement by publishers of the Vancouver Sun and Province newspapers that the guild voted against a cooling-off period in contract talks.

Needham said no vote was taken and mediator Peter Dowding's action Monday in ordering an indefinite adjournment of talks between Pacific Press and six unions representing 1,400 workers had been a unilateral move, made to prevent further polarization between the negotiating parties.

The guild president said in an interview that the mediator also reminded union members that he had the right to declare the adjournment because he was in charge of negotiations.

The contract dispute closed the two newspapers Nov. 1.

Following Monday's adjournment, Sun publisher C. W. Davey and Province publisher Paddy Sherman said the guild was the only one of six unions in the dispute to vote against an indefinite suspension in talks.

They said the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions approved the adjournment of talks, despite the fact that guild members, who form two-thirds of the 1,400 employees involved, voted against it.

They also said the adjournment came when the company was prepared to resume negotiations on critical issues in the dispute.

The guild president said that, while Dowding had requested a news blackout on negotiations, he felt the publishers' statements demanded a response.

"There was no formal split," Needham said of the guild's disagreement with other joint council unions on the cooling-off period disagreement.

Needham said he would like to see talks resume at any time, but Dowding has set no date.

He said the unions have modified their original demands and indicated they are willing to negotiate such thorny issues as manning of presses and contracting-out in the mailing room.

Meanwhile, in a letter to employees dated Dec. 5, Sherman said a joint council bulletin issued Dec. 1 has badly confused the issues in the negotiations.

He said a union official had said Pacific Press pays overtime to pressmen who work into a second shift because it won't hire enough full-time pressmen to do the work required.

Sherman said the company has complained several times that the union is not providing adequate numbers of pressmen for straight-time pay under the contract. As a result the company is forced to lilo double and triple shifts at premium rates.

The Province publisher also said the joint council put forward economic proposals for the first time last Thursday but did not include wages or length of contract.

"But the fringe benefits mentioned alone would have added more than 20 per cent to the wage bill," he said.

The publisher also said the joint council bulletin contained a great deal of destructive rhetoric.

"It probably reflected the frustration we all feel, but it was a saddening distortion of the facts," Sherman said. "The prospects now look bleak enough, unadorned, without poisoning the atmosphere with misinformation."

"Somehow we must get to honest negotiating, with full reporting of what is going on, so that we can end this absolutely unnecessary strike that is doing so much damage to so many."

In a similar letter to Sun employees, Davey said the company's position on manning is accepted practice in many press rooms and mailing rooms in North America.

"It (the company) is not seeking a contract which, from a management point of view, would be a pace-setter but is seeking to bring the Vancouver situation more in line with manning provisions elsewhere."

The company loses $800,

000 a year because the unions' restrictive practices make it impossible to use their members efficiently, Davey said.

Both publishers said the company feels it has demonstrated it is flexible if the manning issue but it must have a promise of relief to meet a deteriorating competitive position.

Too Few Canadians Applying

Speech pathologists from the U.S. are being considered for vacancies in the province, the director of selections for the B.C. public service commission said Thursday.

Ken Hanson said two or three Canadians have applied for speech pathology jobs but there now are eight vacancies in the province.

Four openings are in Prince George where four pathologists resigned in November, saying the workload in the district was unacceptably high.

Hanson said there is a major problem in luring pathologists from Greater Vancouver to Prince George, Nanaimo and Sechart where they are badly needed.

Most pathologists prefer to work in the Vancouver area, he said, although the positions in Prince George are offering higher salaries.

He said that Canadians will be given first choice of jobs, but if they refuse then U.S. applicants will be considered.

SINGLE GLAZING IN SWEDEN ISN'T STUPID.

IT'S CRIMINAL

The Swedes believe in energy conservation. They keep just as warm as us, but at about half the cost. And that's because they believe in good home insulation.

For years they've had to double glaze. Now, under new regulations, they're obliged to triple glaze!

Double-glazing makes the most of any heating system because it can halve the amount of heat lost through windows and patio doors. And these days that adds up to a lot of fuel and money.

Consider the other benefits. Double-glazing reduces condensation and external noise, increases living area and the value of your property. In short, it improves the quality of life. Why not make a beginning with living room where you'll get the greatest benefit? It would be criminal to ignore it.

Phone Granite Industries at 384-4148 for a free written and carefully prepared appraisal of double-glazing your house or condominium. There is no obligation.

Channel Change Upsets CB Monitor

Impending changes in two-way radio regulations will make monitoring the citizens band more difficult, a Victoria operator believes.

Mike Woods, a regular monitor for Radio Emergency Associated Citizens Teams (REACT), referred to a federal transport and communications directive which will end the use of Channel 9 for routine calls as of midnight Dec. 12. From then on, only bona fide emergency messages may be transmitted on that channel.

Woods said this means anyone anticipating a call from another operator will have to monitor a specified channel or all channels by means of a scanner, or else have two radios with one tuned to Channel 9 if constant surveillance of emergency calls is wanted.

The new regulation, approved Nov. 30 after a seminar in eastern Canada, follows the practice specified for American CB operators.

Woods said it was adopted because Channel 9 was overused in the east.

"But it worked fine on the west coast," he said.

Operators have always been able to get through to each other without interfering with the emergency role of Channel 9.

STOLEN SAFE BACK AFTER 20 YEARS

KITIMAT (CP) — A safe which was stolen 20 years ago has been found by a British Columbia Hydro worker putting up a power pole near here. Police said the safe had been taken from the Northern Docks and Warehouse Co. office in 1958. It contained about $800 and some company papers. When the safe was found Wednesday, the money was missing, but the papers were still inside.

Sex Crimes: 14 Years

BURNABY (CP) — Robert Donald Westover, 36, of Burnaby and a former resident of Terrace was sentenced to 14 years in prison Thursday for having sexual relations with a girl under the age of 14 and for gross indecency with a male.

The offences occurred between 1968 and 1978. The Crown argued for a maximum 20-year term, saying Westover would be a danger to society.

Nanaimo Man Says He Saw Hughes Documents Altered

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man who says he is a former member of the British secret service has testified he saw a one-time aide to Howard Hughes falsify documents connected with the late billionaire.

Robbie Robertson of Nanaimo said in County Court that he saw John Meier alter the documents at his home in Delta, south of here.

He was testifying at extradition proceedings in which the United States government wants Meier, a naturalized Canadian, returned to the U.S. so he can be tried on two counts of obstructing justice.

Handwriting expert Lyndal Shaneyfelt, a former agent with the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation, told the hearing he examined documents said to be signed by Hughes.

He said two of them bore genuine signatures by Hughes but a third apparently signed by the billionaire was not in his handwriting.

END RULED TO WILDCAT

BURNABY (CP) — The B.C. Labor Relations Board ordered Thursday an end to a wildcat walkout at the Kenworth truck manufacturing plant here.

The cease-and-desist order was granted against members of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers who walked out Thursday to protest disciplinary action taken against two workers.

Chamber Pleads for Bus

Victoria Chamber of Commerce has invited Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm to take a second look at the proposed sale of a Victoria tour bus system to a Seattle company.

"We have asked the minister for a meeting to discuss this whole question," chamber transportation director Jack McKernan said Thursday.

"He is a new minister and maybe there is hope for a reversal. We believe the buses should be owned by local people if at all possible."

Decision to sell Gray Line buses to Grayline of Seattle Inc. was made by former municipal affairs minister

Hugh Curtis. Vander Zalm has not indicated his reaction to the sale. Grayline has an interim contract to take over the bus system in February if the Foreign Investment Review Agency of Ottawa approves the purchase by an American firm.

MACKAY

Bourassa Weeded PQ Backers?

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservative Elmer Mackay said Thursday an RCMP source within the government of former Quebec premier Robert Bourassa was used to assist in removing Parti Quebecois members from within the province's civil service.

Mackay told the Commons the RCMP conducted a campaign in the early 1970s to remove suspected PQ sympathizers from Quebec public service jobs.

Speaking during a Commons debate, Mackay named Serge Raymond as the source within Quebec's ministry of cultural affairs. He said Raymond's RCMP handler, Michel Papineau, would designate or indicate a public servant who was not acceptable.

"It was Mr. Raymond's job to get rid of that person, using his political connections," Mackay said.

Mackay said he did not think Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais was aware of the information. He urged Blais and the federal commission investigating illegal RCMP practices to investigate the matter.

He said the RCMP operated a Parti Quebecois desk within the force's G section. The entire operation is documented in a top secret file code named MC-83, he said.

Blais's office refused immediate comment on the allegations, saying the solicitor-general had not had time to study the charges.

Mackay named Maurice Goguen as the man in charge of G desk.

The Nova Scotia MP said it was mind-boggling to think that someone could be persecuted without even having the opportunity to defend themselves.

His charges come two months after envelopes containing what appeared to be photocopies of top-secret Telex messages between RCMP security service units in Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec were circulated to several newspapers.

Those messages outlined some details of an RCMP attempt to get information about suspected separatists working for the Liberal government of then premier Bourassa.

The RCMP has refused to confirm or deny the authenticity of the messages.

The federal commission of inquiry into a Quebec inquiry into the RCMP have both heard testimony concerning Operation Ham—the force's attempt to illegally obtain computer lists of those holding memberships in the Parti Quebecois in January, 1973.

Raymond, who no longer works for the civil service, said Thursday in an interview from Quebec City with La Presse Canadienne he did not want to comment on the allegations.

But he did say he did not know Michel Papineau and that the entire incident sounded "like a cowboy film."

He also said the entire affair has been referred to his lawyer.

Mackay has made a number of controversial allegations in the past.

His revelations concerning the Sky Shops affair at Montreal's Dorval airport led to charges being laid against five persons.

He also told the Commons about the operations of Warren Hart, an American who claims he worked as an undercover agent for the RCMP.

And he told of alleged electronic surveillance of his and party leader Joe Clark's office, charges that subsequent investigations failed to substantiate.

Heroin Aid Vow 'Broken'

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MPs accused the government Thursday of reneging on a promise to fund a B.C. heroin addiction treatment centre.

"There is an obligation of the government to keep its word," Opposition Leader Joe Clark said in the Commons.

John Fraser (PC—Vancouver South) said former justice minister Ron Basford had promised to fund the program, but B.C. justice officials now say that commitment has been broken.

If Basford, who represents the riding of Vancouver Centre, ever made any such promises, he did so as an MP advocating his area's interests, not as a government spokesman, Deputy Prime Minister Allan Rock replied.

Health Minister Monique Bégin said her department refused a request for $10 million for the treatment centre. The federal government already gives B.C. $386 million for health programs, and more for social services, she said.

She rejected Fraser's suggestion that the federal government should help because the majority of Canadian heroin addicts live in his province.

No province should use a particular disease or unusual circumstances to ask the federal government for more money, she said.

"Each province has particular circumstances," Bégin added.

Blinding Angel Swoops In

TORONTO (CP) — A stainless steel angel descended on St. Michael's College six months ago, almost blinding some persons and giving others headaches.

"It's so blinding that you can hardly look at it," says Anne Tully, an English teacher at the University of Toronto college.

An office worker has complained it is so bright it gives her migraine headaches.

Mrs. Tully said she was there when the angel first appeared.

"You should have seen it," she said. "It seemed to be flying, flashing in the sun and turning slowly as the crane let it down."

The angel (shown right) is made of six identical, brightly-polished, stainless steel triangles. Standing 15 feet high on a circular granite base, it weighs 2,730 kilograms—nearly three tons.

Sculptor Anne Allardyce calls her creation Michael, after the archangel who in Judeo-Christian mythology drove a band of rebellious angels out of heaven.

In traditional religious art, he is dressed in shining armor and wields a spear.

"I don't know what an angel looks like," says Miss Allardyce. "I don't know if I even believe in angels."

"It was designed as sheer form with no idea of an angel at all. However, these two triangles vaguely suggest wings and another two suggest one leg off the ground as if he is about to fly, but I must admit that what I see in it now I saw after it was conceived."

Many students don't like what they see in Michael.

At a college debate on the sculpture, one student said it reminded him of a terrier cocking his leg.

"It's supposed to be a statue of St. Michael," said Jennifer Hutton, an actuarial science student. "It's weird... it looks like a metal airplane."

But Michael, commissioned by the college at a cost of $35,000, is there to stay.

At Last Ken Can Afford

To Gamble

TORONTO (CP) — A 53-year-old Hamilton man who says he once was separated from his wife because of his gambling found a gamble paid off when he won $1 million in a Loto Canada lottery draw.

Ken Mason, a tire re-treader, won the prize in the Dec. 1 draw but did not discover his good luck until the next day.

"I can afford to gamble now," he said Thursday as he picked up his prize.

Mason said he and his wife, Gwendolyn, separated about five years ago but the family since has been reunited. He said he will give some of the money he won to his six children.

Computer Banking Worries B.C. Group

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has failed to adequately consider the social and legal ramifications of emerging computer banking systems, a British Columbia delegation said Thursday.

Appearing before the Commons finance committee, A.R. Alexander said his province is deeply concerned that the electronic payments system becoming one of the cornerstones of banking may be detrimental to the public interest.

He urged the government to discuss with the provinces and private interests specific laws setting out who should have access to a universal computer payments system.

Such a system could contain an individual's payroll account, debts, spending records, loan information, credit rating and other financial records.

Under federal proposals being reviewed, planning for electronic payment system would be left up to the Canadian Payments Association, a private voluntary organization representing the banks and other financial institutions.

The B.C. delegation also was uneasy about the growing dominance of ChargeX and Master Charge in the credit card field.

Alexander said these two universal credit cards already have such a stranglehold that no competition is likely to emerge. This presents a serious threat to the future of small lending institutions which have not been allowed to join these credit card networks.

He urged that all lending institutions be immediately permitted access to these bank-card systems as long as they satisfy reasonable terms of membership. This would mean they could both issue cards and service the ones their customers already hold.

Although the stated objective of the proposed revision of the country's 11-year-old banking legislation is to increase competition with the financial system, the draft bill seems to do the opposite, Alexander said.

Chartered banks already have what he called an insurmountable lead in terms of financial resources.

I've Got Clout - Andras

By VIC PARSONS
Canadian Press
OTTAWA — Robert Andras, minister responsible for the government's new economic board, said Thursday he will have the final say if cabinet ministers on the nine-member panel cannot agree on economic development policy.

Andras said in an interview he is being given extensive power as head of the board—first announced Nov. 24 by Prime Minister Trudeau—and he intends to use it if necessary.

The role of the new board and its relationship to the finance and industry ministries has been the source of some speculation since it was first announced. Last weekend, Andras said he would have authority to review every economic development proposal and the funds needed to carry them out.

Andras said Thursday that he expected battles within the cabinet and he hoped by weight of argument to get a co-ordinated, cohesive approach to economic problems from his colleagues.

"But if I can't, within reasonable time frames, then I will have to say: 'Well, this is the way I read it and this is the way it's going to be,' very much as the prime minister does with cabinet," he said.

"I've got a pretty clear mandate in terms of clout which is there, I hope, for reserve. But I'll use it if I have to."

Andras said ministers would have the right to appeal to cabinet if they disagree with his decisions or those of the board. But if rulings are set aside too frequently, the board would have to choose a new head.

"I don't want to paint the picture as that bloody," he said. "It simply means convincing at first, then saying that's the way it has got to be."

"Otherwise it's just another structure and I don't intend to be party to it."

"We must get things done and we must make decisions. We can't become just another paper-processing, obstructionist, red-tape outfit," Andras said.

The board will include the ministers of industry, trade and commerce; labor; manpower; small business; revenue; regional economic expansion; energy and science; finance and treasury board.

Debate on the order was to have begun this week but will be held up until after Prime Minister Trudeau returns next week from a trip to London and Paris.

The order says the ministry would formulate and develop new and comprehensive policies that directly support industrial development, including the manufacturing, resource and service industries.

The minister would define an integrated federal approach in supporting and developing industry; review departmental proposals before they go to treasury board—the government spending agency—or cabinet and develop ways to deliver programs better.

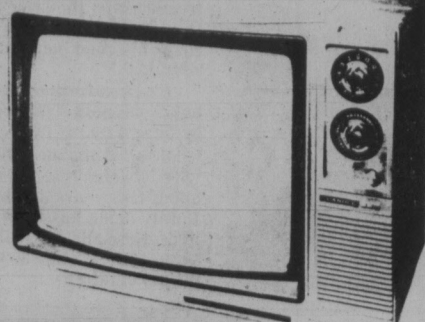

Andras shied away from suggestions of Sinclair Stevens, Progressive Conservative finance critic, that he will be the government's "virtual supreme economic commander."

That description was a political ploy aimed at dividing the cabinet, said Andras, adding that Finance Minister Jean Chretien will remain the government spokesman on broad economic policy whereas the board would aim more at putting federal programs together.

Lag in U.S. Affects Canada?

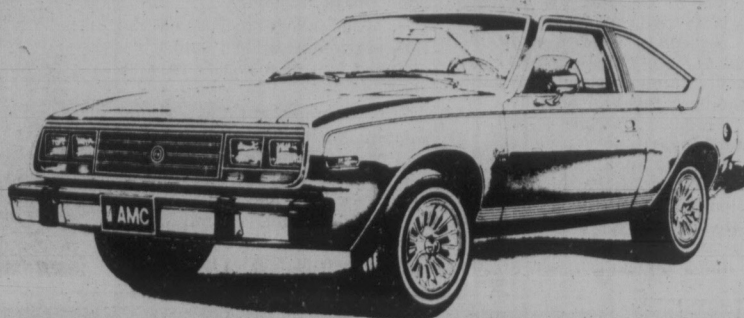

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian economy will be affected by slower growth in the United States in 1979, Judith Maxwell, director of policy analysis at the C.D. Howe Research Institute, told a meeting of Quebec business graduates.

But Leon Courville, director of the institute of applied economics at the University of Montreal, told the group that the whole Canadian economy would grow by about 3.8 per cent next year compared with 1978. Quebec's growth would be about three per cent, with the devalued Canadian dollar still boosting domestic manufacturing, he said.

WANTED: Canadian Kojaks With a Lollipop of Liberties

OTTAWA (CP) — Every devotee of U.S.-produced television shows knows what happens to a person who is arrested.

A policeman reads a litany of rights: "You have the right to make a telephone call, the right to remain silent, you have the right to legal counsel."

But not in Canada. New Democrat MP Cyril Symes (Sault Ste. Marie) thinks the average Canadian deserves at least the same rights as Kojak's suspects.

He has introduced a private member's bill in the Commons to increase the rights of Canadians when arrested.

The Criminal Code now requires a policeman only to tell the accused the reason for his arrest, or under what type of warrant the arrest is made.

Symes said his concern was prompted by the prevalence of U.S. crime shows on Canadian television. They "have led many Canadians to believe that if charged they are entitled to a telephone call," Symes said.

"The reality is that no such right exists in Canada."

His proposed changes would give suspects this right, along with the right to remain silent and to obtain legal counsel.

Canadian policemen don't bother to clarify confusion caused by U.S. television, Symes said.

He cited a 1970 study by the Canadian Civil Liberties Association of 533 random cases in five major cities.

The study showed that more than two-thirds of those arrested asked to see a lawyer, but were not allowed to do so for the first 24 hours they were in police custody.

Teacup Trial: Cass-Beggs

WINNIPEG (CP) — The former chairman of Manitoba Hydro completed his testimony at an inquiry into Hydro's northern power projects Thursday by defending all his decisions and actions.

David Cass-Beggs said the whole matter could be considered "a storm in a teacup, although it was some teacup and some storm."

Cass-Beggs faced four days of extensive questioning at the Trites inquiry, and rejected suggestions that he misled Hydro board members and a legislative committee, or that he forced his own opinions to the forefront.

"I regret that the process didn't take place with better personal relationships," he said.

"I apologize to those who may have felt I treated them roughly."

Cass-Beggs, who headed the corporation from 1970 to 1972, said he believed the Hydro board was fully informed when it made its decision in July, 1970, to proceed with the Lake Winnipeg regulation project followed by diversion of the Churchill River.

The regulation and diversion projects were designed to increase water flows to the Nelson River, where hydro-electric plants could be built.

Brief Vacation For PM

PARIS (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau plans to take a brief vacation "somewhere in France" following his meeting today with President Giscard d'Estaing of France.

A Canadian Embassy official said Trudeau will remain in Paris until Sunday and then take a private vacation outside the capital.

Trudeau arrived here today following a day's stop in London, where he visited the Queen to receive her approval for the appointment of former Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer as Governor-General.

Economic issues are also expected to dominate the talks with the French president.

They then drove by limousine to the presidential palace where a 19-man guard of honor saluted Trudeau upon his arrival. Another eight-man guard stood on the steps leading to the interior offices.

Gov't Defeats Mail-Probe Motion

OTTAWA (CP) — The government majority in the Commons Thursday night blocked a two-day opposition attempt to start a Commons committee investigation into ministerial responsibility for RCMP mail opening.

In voting down a Progressive Conservative motion by 107 to 75, the Liberals in effect rejected a contention that the privileges of MPs were violated by an unidentified RCMP official.

That official was the author of a 1973 statement that the force did not open mail, an untrue statement that Speaker James Jerome said Wednesday misled the Commons and perhaps a solicitor-general. The Speaker ruled there was a prima facie case of contempt against the Commons.

The two days of often bitter debate revolved around a letter sent in 1973 by then solicitor-general Warren Allmand to Conservative Allan Lawrence.

The debate was unique and the vote left some opposition MPs saying the position of the Speaker in the Commons was eroded. The letter said: "I have been assured by the RCMP that it is not their practice to intercept the private mail of anyone." It has been since revealed that the federal police had opened mail for 40 years.

Conservatives linked the Allmand letter with a recent statement by W. L. Higgitt, former RCMP commissioner, to the federal inquiry into RCMP wrongdoing. That statement said "the practice was very often ministers' letters were not exactly drafted on precise statements of fact."

The opposition made much of the fact that a statement by the Speaker that the Commons had been held in contempt was rejected by the Liberal majority only twice since 1965. The other time also concerned RCMP operations.

The debate disrupted Commons business, delaying debate on creation of a new government ministry, a vote on money to pay for government operations and a debate on Conservative complaints that social insurance numbers are being abused by the government.

Jerome rejected the suggestion made by several New Democrats that he would have to consider resigning if the motion was defeated.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), a 36-year veteran of the Commons, said the government's refusal to allow the motion amounted to "an offence to the chair."

The Conservatives, led by Lawrence, said the matter must be sent to committee to determine whether Allmand knew of mail opening, despite denials.

Lawrence, a former Ontario attorney-general, said there have been allegations that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency trained RCMP personnel in mail opening.

"We are dealing with the question of governmental and ministerial knowledge,"

Somebody in government must have known what was going on.

"We still do not know whether the minister did not know (of mail opening) as he says he did not know. We still do not know whether he did not want to know. If he did not want to know, then he is as guilty as if he did know, and he himself actively committed that contempt against every member of this House."

Some opposition MPs said in rejecting that argument that the government simply wants to keep RCMP matters out of the public eye until after next spring's federal election.

Jerome said his ruling was unique. In the past he had considered whether a minister had breached the privileges of the Commons or an individual MP.

But he now had come to the conclusion that some other person, not a minister and not a government, had obstructed the work of the Commons. In fact there might have been a deliberate attempt to obstruct the minister.

Woman Prime Minister Within 15 Years - Grit

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A Liberal senator has predicted that a woman will be elected as the Canadian prime minister within the next three elections—within 15 years.

Senator Roy Frith, Ontario campaign chairman for the federal Liberal party, said Thursday the face of Canadian politics will take a radical change within 15 years when a woman is elected prime minister.

He told a Liberal student group that he hopes his prediction becomes reality.

Purchasing Power Of Workers Slips

TORONTO (CP) — Food prices and the decline in the Canadian dollar have reduced workers' purchasing power to 1976 levels, a senior economist with the Conference Board of Canada says.

Paul Fenton said at a housing conference of the Toronto Home Builders Association that the loss of buying power has serious labor-management implications, with unions wanting to make up real incomes and employers facing flat markets.

Wage settlements this year are averaging six per cent while inflation is nine per cent, he said.

The board, a non-profit organization supported by industry and labor, studies economic trends.

Fenton said 1979 will be a replay of this year with unemployment rising to nine per cent from 8½ per cent and the bright spot likely will be a drop to a 7½-per-cent inflation rate.

Builders, however, who have 15,000 unsold units in Metropolitan Toronto, cannot expect any better conditions next year, he said.

A bankruptcy trustee told delegates that some Toronto builders are facing criminal prosecution over misuse of funds because of the losses sustained by their subcontractors.

Jack Biddell, chairman of Clarkson and Co. and a consultant to Canadian businesses in financial trouble, said construction now rates third, after retail and service trades, in bankruptcies.

He explained that in the past, legal action was not taken against builders who used draws—mortgage advances on one project to keep another going.

But now the growing number of failures among builders and the heavy losses being sustained by suppliers and contractors is resulting in prosecutions, he said.

SUSPENSIONS SOAR

TORONTO (CP) — Student suspensions this term have doubled and tripled compared with last year in some Ontario school districts.

School board officials say the increase is the result of alcohol abuse, misbehavior, theft, fighting and truancy.

High school suspensions in the Metropolitan Toronto borough of Scarborough have almost doubled, to 47 this term from 25 in the 1977 fall term.

ARMS PROBE UNFINISHED - BLAIS

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP investigation into an alleged illegal arms shipment to South Africa is still incomplete. Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais said Thursday.

He refused to say whether evidence gathered by United States authorities against Space Research Corp. has been handed over to the RCMP.

A Rutland, Vt., newspaper says United States authorities are to ask a grand jury to decide whether charges should be laid against Space

Research in North Troy, Vt. for alleged illegal arms shipments.

The Space Research Corp. president, D. L. Gregory, has refused comment on news reports of the grand jury proceeding.

Space Research straddles

the Quebec-Vermont border with operations at Highwater, Que., as well as North Troy.

A CBC report said recently the company shipped 155-mm. artillery shells to Antigua for testing and re-shipped them to South Africa from Antigua.

Shelton Gets The Gong: From TV Celebrity Back to Jail

DAVENPORT, Iowa — James Shelton says he's ready to surrender — after one television appearance on The Dating Game and two on The Gong Show.

Lawyer Doran Shifley said Thursday that Shelton telephoned him this week and wants to return to Iowa and go back to jail.

During the conversation, Shelton told Shifley that he had taped the TV appearances during his year's absence from prison.

WASHINGTON — The old gang was here when Richard Nixon came to call. It was the biggest gathering of Nixon loyalists since they all wept together at his farewell from the White House.

Few of the really big names of the Nixon era were at the party Thursday night. H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman are still in prison. John Ehrlichman hasn't sounded too friendly lately. Next to Nixon's, the most recognizable face was that of Rose Mary Woods, his former secretary and the most faithful of them all.

The meeting was called by the February Group, an informal association of Nixon and Ford White House staff members who meet every three months or so to have a drink together and reminisce.

It was Nixon's first visit here since he came to town for Hubert Humphrey's memorial service 11 months ago. Immediately after the party, he flew back to Manhattan in a private plane loaned him by his close friend, Robert Abplanalp, the aerosol bomb magnate.

Nixon spent most of his time at the affair — at a hotel reception hall here — shaking hands and trading war stories about the White House years. But just before he left, he stepped up to a microphone to offer the assemblage a few minutes of philosophy ("The important thing is not that you win or lose, but that you don't quit.") and a preview of his new book.

The book, Nixon said, should be finished next year, and will provide "an analysis of the world situation," together with "a strategy for peace and freedom for the balance of the century."

The former president, looking grayer and thinner than when he appeared in televised interviews last year, was visibly cheered by the large turnout of former aides and the warm reception they gave him.

On his arrival at the hotel, he was met by a single protester, who shouted a single "Boo," and a horde of reporters who shouted a host of questions.

Hail, Hail the Gang's All Here...

TORONTO — British actor Oliver Reed (left) did an unscheduled nude scene on a city street, but police just laughed.

After a long lunch, Reed left a restaurant without his pants.

Wearing shoes, shirt and a necktie, he ambled across a street towards the hotel where he is staying while playing the lead role in a Canadian film, The Brood.

Two Metropolitan Toronto police officers in a cruiser saw him and laughed. They did not book the 40-year-old actor, but escorted him to his hotel room.

WHERE THERE'S SMOKE...

SAN JOSE — The apparent cause of the fires was routine. But what followed was not: A 53-year-old delicatessen owner faces charges of careless smoking after three fires at his home.

"Enough is enough," fire investigator Jim Friday said Thursday, describing how Lew Lieske was arrested on a little-known misdemeanor charge involving persons who "directly or indirectly" start a fire with their cigarettes.

Lieske was charged after neighbors complained Lieske's smoking in bed had caused three fires at his house in 13 months, according to Friday.

The 53-year-old Lieske, speaking with some difficulty over what he described as congested lungs from smoke inhalation, complained: "The charges are unfounded, as far as I'm concerned. I don't need all this publicity." He is free on $500 bail.

If the case goes to trial and Lieske is found guilty, he might get six months in jail and a $500 fine on each count.

"The neighbors are worried about their houses catching fire from his house," Friday said. "And it's endangering the lives of firefighters and causing a lot of damage."

Cards for 10,000

OTTAWA — Pierre Trudeau wants to give a Christmas card to everyone who met him this year. So, his office says, he's sending out 10,000.

This year, like last year, the front of the card is contains a color picture of the prime minister and his three young sons — Justin, 7 on Christmas Day, Sacha, 6 on Christmas Day and Michel, 3.

But unlike last year, the photograph on this year's card is taken by a professional photographer, Peter Croydon of Toronto. Last year, Trudeau's estranged wife Margaret took a picture of the prime minister and his sons for the card.

The prime minister's 1978 card shows him sitting on a brown easy chair at his official residence at 24 Sussex Drive with Michel on his knee, Sacha pointing to a book the three have been reading and Justin perched by his side.

Sid Proves He's a Really Vicious One

NEW YORK (UPI) — British punk rocker Sid Vicious, who was charged with killing his girlfriend and later tried to kill himself, is back in jail on charges he slugged the brother of punk star Patti Smith at a New York disco.

Vicious, whose real name is John Simon Ritchie, had been free on $50,000 bail awaiting trial on charges he killed Nancy Spungen, his American girlfriend, with a hunting knife.

Vicious, lead guitarist for the now defunct Sex Pistols, was booked Thursday on assault charges for an incident police said occurred Wednesday at Hurrah's, a fashionable Manhattan discotheque.

Police said Vicious struck Todd Smith in the left eye with a beer mug about 1:30 a.m. after they argued. The wound required five stitches, police said.

Vicious' overtures to a female guitarist of a band called Skafish, which had just finished a set, were said to have annoyed Smith, causing the dispute.

When he was arrested Oct. 12, Vicious allegedly confessed to killing Miss Spungen.

If convicted of slaying

Miss Spungen, he faces a prison term of 15 years to life.

NEW LICENCE DEMANDED FOR MD 'Lusty' Ad: $750,000 Suit

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — The 12 jurors who acquitted Dr. Mario Jascalevich of murder charges two months ago demanded Thursday that the New Jersey Board of Medical Examiners restore his licence to practice.

The unprecedented letter from jurors in the 31-week trial that ended Oct. 21 was to state Medical Examiner Dr. Edwin Albano.

The letter said: "We the jury, which completely vindicated Dr. Mario E. Jascalevich of all charges, are outraged by the continuing refusal of the New Jersey state medical authorities to restore his medical licence."

Jascalevich originally was charged with administering lethal doses of the powerful muscle relaxant curare to five patients. Two charges were dropped for lack of evidence during his Superior Court trial, which was highlighted by a fair trial-free press contest and the jailing of New York Times reporter Myron Farber. Not guilty verdicts were returned on the three remaining counts.

Jascalevich surrendered his medical licence when he was indicted in May, 1976.

The 51-year-old Argentine-born surgeon faces administrative charges before the medical board of gross malpractice in the handling of patients in 1971 and 1975—eight to nine years after the deaths at Riverdel Hospital in Oradell.

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (UPI) — "I'm a father of four children and a husband. I'm not supposed to be a playboy."

Thomas M. Mazzeo says that is why he's suing Playboy magazine for $750,000.

He says they used a picture of him waterskiing on a lake near his hometown of Pittsfield which advertised him as a playboy with a "lust for life."

Mazzeo claims the magazine used the ad — which is hanging in airports, bus terminals, and major newspapers across the country — without his consent or knowledge from April to October 1977.

So he filed suit against them in Berkshire County Superior Court.

Goldings of Boston, said the picture had been taken by a professional photographer and then used by Playboy without securing a release from his client.

"The magazine enriched itself unjustly at Mazzeo's expense," Goldings said.

Mazzeo's complaint states that the use of the caption photo has falsely identified him "as a Playboy reader and as a proponent and example of the way of life associated with and promoted by the defendant's magazine and other business ventures."

"That way of life includes permissive attitudes toward sexual behavior, drug use, and other activities," the complaint says.

Is Herbert Dead? Two Wives Ask

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Is Herbert Blitz legally dead? His current wife and his former wife are seeking an answer in court, with continuing alimony and child-support payments at stake.

Carolyn Blitz said Thursday that her husband of nine years should no longer be required to pay alimony and child-support payments because his brain is dead. Mrs. Blitz, acting as conservator of her husband's estate, filed suit last August in Orange County Superior Court seeking to block the payments.

But Marilyn Blitz of Orange County, who was married to the Sherman Oaks lawyer for 14 years before their divorce, says she saw Blitz move when she visited him recently at the Wadsworth Veteran's Hospital in West Los Angeles.

A hearing in the case is scheduled Dec. 27. "When I touched him, he jerked—really quite violently," Marilyn Blitz said, adding the movement signified "a level of consciousness where he's aware."

Marilyn Blitz, a secretary, receives $150 monthly in alimony and $150 monthly for the support of the one child she had by Blitz—a girl now 17.

Carolyn Blitz said doctors have told her that her husband's movements are involuntary.

"He does twitch, but it's totally involuntary," Mrs. Blitz said. "It's the same thing as when a cadaver sometimes moves."

Carolyn Blitz's lawyer, Ray Fuller, says the women have about the same monthly income—$1,000.

Some Memories and a Battered Bugle

TORONTO (CP) — Edwin McCormick has returned to the Queen's Own Rifles to pick up some memories and the bugle he carried through the Boer War.

"It was almost 80 years ago that I last played this," he said as he examined the battered but polished brass instrument.

McCormick, celebrating his 95th birthday in the regiment's sergeant's mess, said he first used the bugle in 1897 when he joined the regiment's band in Toronto as a bugle boy of 15.

He said he found out by accident that the bugle was with the regiment when he talked recently with Sgt. Maj. John Doig.

Sgt. Maj. Doig said he was surprised to hear from McCormick but remembered his name because it was engraved on the instrument. Sgt. Maj. Doig said he also had played the instrument for many years.

McCormick, who later attained the rank of major and believes he is the last survivor of the Boer War from the regiment, said it was a night to bring back a lot of memories.

He donated the bugle to the regiment to be put on display.

VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 8, 1978, PAGE 23

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

A real estate survey shows Victoria utility bills are 30 per cent higher than those in Vancouver and 53 per cent more than in Calgary.

The national survey by Royal Trust, shows the annual utility bill for a typical modern three-bedroom home would be $790 in Victoria, $610 in Vancouver, $517 in Calgary, $531 in Edmonton and $625 in Regina.

The figures are for heating, appliances and lights but not including telephones.

Victoria's costs were the highest west of Winnipeg.

They were also higher than Toronto, which came in at $750.

The major cost factor in Victoria is the lack of natural gas, which is a comparatively cheap heating fuel.

Most Victorians use oil and in the typical house the annual heating bill is $373, according to the survey.

By contrast, a house of similar size and quality could be heated (by natural gas) for $269 a year in Vancouver, for $293 in Calgary and $296 in Edmonton.

Almost all new homes being built in Vancouver are heated with natural gas.

Victoria Labor Council president John Shields said the figures indicate Victoria should revive its campaign from the early 1970s for a natural gas pipeline to the Island.

He said a saving of more than $100 a year in heating bills for thousands of Victorians would make the investment worthwhile.

Shields said people who retire to Victoria must find the burden particularly onerous because they are not in a position to bargain for increases to meet the high cost of living here.

Natural gas and electricity is provided by B.C. Hydro, a Crown corporation, and the government has a responsibility to equalize the costs among all citizens.

Shields said he hopes the report will not upset Victoria's status as a good retirement centre.

But Don Fraser, manager of Royal Trust's Douglas St. real estate office, said people arriving from the Prairies are so grateful to be here and out of the cold weather they don't complain about the utility bills — although they notice the heating bill is higher.

The survey showed the following costs on an annual basis:

VICTORIA: Electricity (including some appliances) $264, water heating by oil $153, space heating by oil $373. Total $790.

VANCOUVER: Electricity $248, water heating by natural gas $93, space heating by natural gas $269. Total $610.

CALGARY: Electricity $168, water heating by gas $56, space heating by gas $296. Total $517.

REGINA: Electricity $206, water heating by gas $67, space heating by gas $352. Total $625.

WINNIPEG: Electricity $213, water heating by gas $122, space heating by gas $351. Total $886.

TORONTO: Electricity $171, water heating by gas $142, space heating by gas $445. Total $750.

MONTREAL: Electricity $179, water heating by electricity $145, space heating by oil $341. Total $868.

The survey was prepared by Royal Trust's senior investment analyst for utilities and transportation, John Hough of Montreal.

He said in an interview the numbers could be helpful for companies transferring employees to various cities who are trying to figure out how much to make in the way of an equalization payment.

The figures also are helpful to the real estate arm of Royal Trust, he said.

"I got the numbers by phoning across Canada. In one month my phone bill was $490 for this project alone. And employees of Royal Trust in various cities provided additional information."

In each case the lowest cost system was used for comparison.

For example, the few Victoria houses using electricity (instead of an oil furnace) for heating could expect an annual bill of $538 on average, compared with $373 for oil.

Warming the water heater in Victoria costs $153 a year by oil and $189 by electricity.

The cost structure is similar for larger houses. For example, the utility bill for a modern four-bedroom home would be $1,011 in Victoria, $746 in Vancouver, $648 in Calgary and $992 in Toronto.

Telephone and cablevision costs are not included in any of the above figures.

Estimated annual telephone costs are $201 in Victoria, $226 in Vancouver, $355 in Calgary and $280 in Toronto.

Cablevision costs are $81 in Victoria, $87 in Vancouver, $111 in Calgary and $280 in Toronto.

Gasoline costs for all family cars total $741 in Victoria, $731 in Vancouver, $622 in Calgary and $736 in Toronto.

The survey showed Victoria runs second to Vancouver for the highest average temperature in Canada. The average day-night temperature (Celsius) is 9.6 in Victoria, 9.8 in Vancouver, 3.9 in Calgary and 7.5 in Toronto.

But in one sense Victoria is also the coldest in Canada. Hough computed the number of days major Canadian cities had temperatures lower than 18 degrees Celsius and Victoria led the list.

No Threat Seen From Minister By Region Head

Capital Regional District chairman Murray Glazier said today he sees no threat in Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm's desire to halt creeping powers of regional boards.

There may be movements elsewhere to increase regional authority, Glazier said, but in the CRD the only functions are those which have been assigned by the province or which local governments have asked the region to assume.

"Frankly, I read nothing unfavorable or threatening in the minister's statements," Glazier said.

"My personal approach is to restrict our approach to these assigned powers."

"Our district is a child of the province, and I learned long ago not to fight with my parents unless it's very, very serious."

"Creeping bureaucracy just doesn't apply here," he said.

Glazier claimed the CRD has a solid and competent staff and limited functions although different conditions may apply within B.C.'s 26 other regional districts.

"He's assumed his portfolio and made his remarks about regional districts (generally)," Glazier said. "I don't take them as directed at the CRD."

Vander Zalm's said as municipal affairs minister he would be as tough on regional districts as he was on social assistance issues when he was human resources minister.

The minister rejected a recommendation contained in a current study of regional governments which advised broadening their autonomy and authority as a fourth level of government.

Vander Zalm said his duty is to reduce the quantity of government. Glazier said he will wait until the minister makes more detailed comments on the report's 62 recommendations before giving his views as they relate to the CRD.

One subject on which the CRD and local governments seem in accord is urban transit.

Glazier said he has yet to be satisfied on three points: — Whether the CRD (and the Greater Vancouver Regional District) will be assigned to co-ordinate and operate transit.

— Whether it is necessary to appoint a board of transit commissioners, adding a further level of bureaucracy to the urban districts.

— Funding for transit operating subsidy, which the government intends to supply from a higher gasoline tax and a surcharge on Hydro bills.

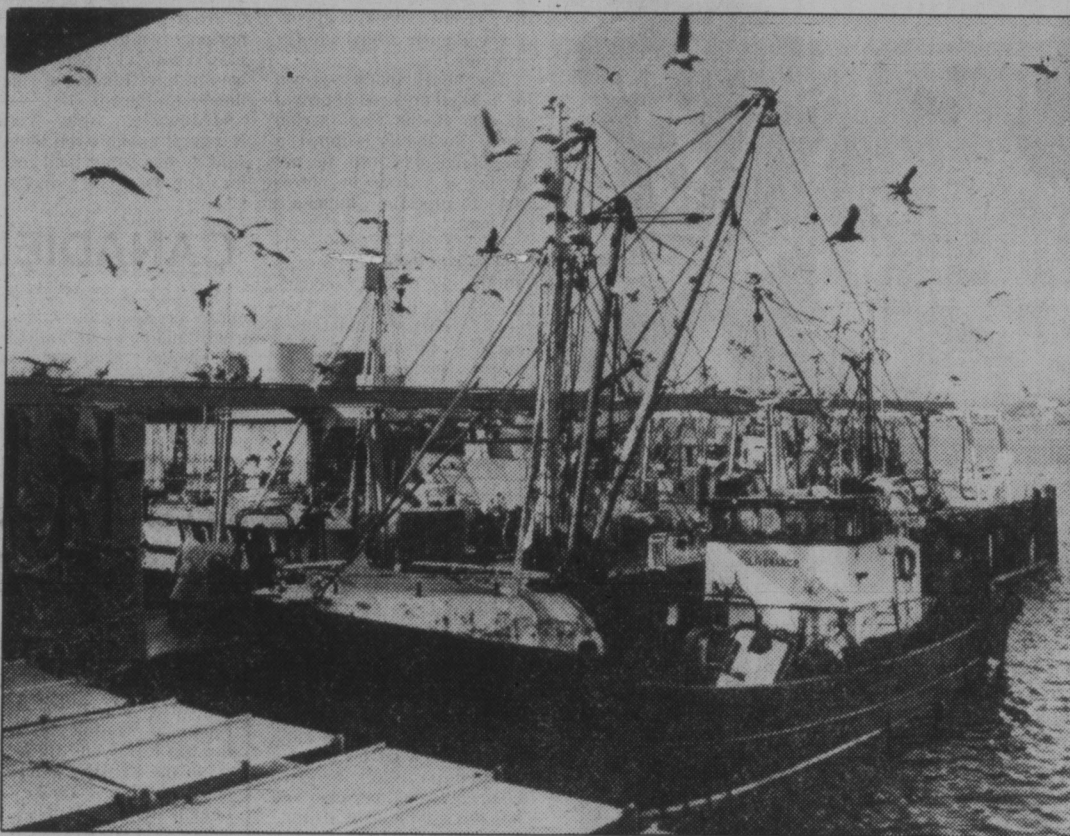

Glazier said forecasts indicate the municipalities will have to dip into property taxes to make up deficits within three or four years.

Vander Zalm said he will be giving immediate attention to the recently created Urban Transit Authority, which comes under his jurisdiction, and will be talking to local elected people and officials to learn the strengths and weaknesses of the proposed handover.

He said he would be prepared to ask the government to revise its plans if necessary.

Glazier will be among Union of B.C. Municipalities executive scheduled to have a lengthy meeting with Vander Zalm on Tuesday.

Transit and the regional district review report will be among the items discussed.

SEAGULL SERENADE welcomed the fishpucker Deliverance to Oaklands Fisheries Ltd. on Montreal Street this week when she arrived with a full load of herring. The plant, in the middle of the hectic herring season, produces marinated herring products, salted herring, frozen filets and whole herring.

Royal Jubilee Hospital is short of beds in its coronary-care wards because of a sharp increase in heart attacks.

The coronary-care facilities are full to overflowing, says hospital administrator Dr. Archie Pickles.

Heart Attacks Up

He said Thursday the 13-bed sub-critical heart ward was occupied by 19 patients that morning and still had 17 in the afternoon.

He said the overcrowding was the worst it has ever been in the ward.

Patients just out of the five-bed coronary intensive care section are held in the sub-critical ward.

The coronary intensive care section is used to care for only the most seriously ill patients.

Chances the hospital will expand the ward are not great. The hospital's fourth floor is almost entirely devoted to heart patients.

In Greater Victoria, the arbitration meetings will be held at the district offices.

A third meeting will be held Dec. 15 if necessary, a spokesman for the school board said today.

The arbitration award must be made by Dec. 31.

Hear Joe and Dodge Taxes

Want to help get the Liberals out and reduce your income tax at the same time?

P.C. Canada, with headquarters at 900 West Rensselaire in Vancouver, has come up with a gimmick which it hopes will achieve both purposes.

It's the $125-a-head dinner in honor of Tory leader Joe Clark at the Hotel Vancouver on Feb. 15.

Invitations are in the mail and are not restricted to the converted. One was received this week by long-time Liberal supporter Bette Botterell.

She said the invitation includes detailed instructions on how to claim $100 of the $125 dinner tab for income tax purposes, suggesting that if the $125 is paid before Dec. 31 the $100 can be claimed on this year's income tax.

What's the connection between red tape and black-top?

Whatever it is, it might explain the presence of Sam Bawlf, the newly-created minister of deregulation (oh that awful word!), among the government bigwigs attending next Monday's formal opening of the widened Trans-Canada Highway.

Bawlf, of course, is a Victoria MLA and it's therefore reasonable enough to assume he would be in on the self-congratulatory ceremony.

But the press release from the premier's office refers to him specifically as "Deregulations Minister Sam Bawlf."

(While we're on the subject, without wishing to be picky, does deregulation have a final "s" or doesn't it?)

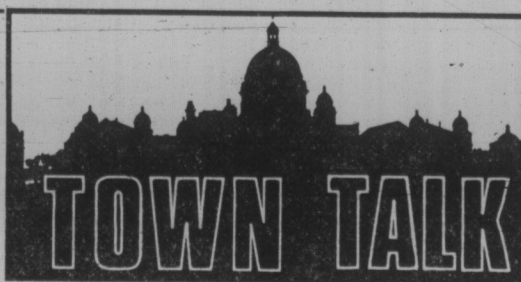

Rhoda Was Here!

The dock crew at the AirWest terminal in Inner Harbor nearly tripped over their gas hoses the other day when Valerie Harper hopped off an afternoon flight and flashed them a smile as she trotted up to a waiting car.

The next day the star of the just-cancelled television show, Rhoda, showed up for a return flight to Vancouver.

She didn't say much, AirWest Victoria manager Andy Glover said. She was just like any other passenger, only better looking than most.

No one knows why the actress dropped into Victoria for 24 hours.

So the big cabinet shuffle Monday was a big surprise, eh?

The official stance is that members of cabinet only got the word on the changes Sunday morning.

But Thursday the press gallery received a Christmas card from Jim Hewitt, who shifted from agriculture to energy, mines and petroleum resources.

The card simply said Seasons Greetings from Jim Hewitt, Minister, province of British Columbia.

Now surely there was no reason for Jim to have told his printers not to call him by his full title — minister of agriculture — when he ordered the cards a week or two ago, was there?

Well, Who Else?

Guess which Saanich alderman was seen a few days ago blithely ignoring the traffic signs and doing a sharp U-turn around the newly-installed concrete median at the Bailey bridges on the Blanshard extension ... so that he could drive into the municipal hall grounds?

Here are some clues:

— He's a former member of the Saanich police board.

— In the past year he chaired council's bylaw enforcement committee.

— He recently admitted he was stopped twice for speeding on the same day.

— He's embroiled in a controversy over a certain illegal drainage project on municipal land.

Got it? Right. His name is Geoff Vantreigt.

GIANTS OFFER THREE PLAYERS, $40,000 FOR UNHAPPY SLUGGER

Carew Studying Shift to 'Frisco

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Rod Carew, the unhappy seven-time American League batting champion, has a chance to escape from Minnesota today if he wants to play for San Francisco.

"It's up to Mr. Carew," said Twins owner Calvin Griffith. Carew has told Griffith he will not sign with Minnesota after the 1979 season, the first baseman's contract option year.

Carew indicated he would wait to see what the Giants had to offer before he made a decision on the trade.

"I didn't want to go to San Francisco," Carew said. "I don't know how it's going to turn out." Carew said he and his agent would meet with Giants' officials today in Minneapolis.

Griffith has no choice but to trade Carew and get some value for one of the game's best hitters, or lose him for nothing in the free-agent re-entry market.

Carew's wife, Marilyn, was quoted as saying her husband already had turned down earlier trade deals with the Giants.

"That's right," she said. "He refused them (the Giants) times. He told the Twins that, and he told San Francisco too. It will just be up to Rod, for him to decide where he thinks it's good for him as a player."

San Francisco owner Bob Lurie reportedly has offered and rookie pitcher Phil Nasti to Minnesota. The Twins also may get $400,000, the dollar limit allowed in a trade by commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Carew, 33, who has spent his 10-year major league career with the Twins, has the right to approve or disapprove the trade.

Carew's wife, Marilyn, was quoted as saying her husband already had turned down earlier trade deals with the Giants.

"That's right," she said. "He refused them (the Twins) times. He told the Twins that, and he told San Francisco too. It will just be up to Rod, for him to decide where he thinks it's good for him as a player."

San Francisco owner Bob Lurie reportedly has offered

Carew a five-year contract worth $3.5 million, the same deal Carew was asking from the Twins.

"If they (the Twins) had gotten closer to what I wanted, I would have stayed," Carew said. "But they didn't really try to sign me. They said, 'That's too much for us,' and that was it."

While Carew considered the San Francisco offer, the world champion New York Yankees lurked in the background. The Yankees also bid for Carew, and president

"Rosen said the odds that his team would wind up with baseball's most consistent hitter were about 2-5."

"The Giants and Twins have a deal if Carew approves," Rosen said resignedly, not knowing that Carew had said the Yankees were not on his list. Carew said he preferred Los Angeles, Kansas City, Milwaukee or Philadelphia over San Francisco, but not New York.

Unless the Giants complete the deal by midnight tonight, when the inter-league trading deadline expires, Griffith would have to hang onto Carew until March, or trade him to an American League team. Griffith insisted that he didn't feel as if he had a gun at his head.

The trade was the second blockbuster at the otherwise trade-quiet week-long meetings. Philadelphia Phillies on Tuesday signed free agent Pete Rose to a reported four-year, $3.2 million contract.

In the only other trade

Thursday, Boston Red Sox unloaded a controversial pitcher Bill Lee to Montreal Expos for infielder Stan Papi.

Lee, 31, often at odds with the Red Sox front office and field manager Don Zimmer, was 10-10 for the Sox last year, but he didn't pitch at all the last month of the 1978 season.

Lee joins catcher Duffy Dyer, infielder Ken Macha, and first baseman Tony Solaita as additions to the Expos' roster since the end of last season.

The American and National League held their separate and joint meetings Thursday and, as expected, asked for specific television money figures, precise schedules and discussion with the players before taking any action on the revolutionary proposal to create three division leagues and double-tiered playoffs.

Kuhn said the full 18-man committee would meet on the subject in January. The commissioner said he felt the three divisional concept was feasible but needed further study.

Both league presidents reported that the committee on umpires had finalized uniformity on technique. They said the strike zone would be the same. Players have often complained that the strike zone in the National League differed from that in the American League.

"The zone will be from mid-breast to mid-knee," said Lee MacPhail, AL president.

Canucks Extend Lead

Times News Services

Ron Sedlbauer was off on another space odyssey in the National Hockey League for two periods Thursday but when he landed in the third, the result shook Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum for minutes.

The near-capacity crowd of 15,353 thundered approval at 9:05 of the final period when Sedlbauer slipped a backhand shot into the net during a Vancouver power play to give the Canucks a 3-2 lead.

Rookie Curt Fraser's second goal of the game, into an empty net with 12 seconds remaining, helped the Canucks remain undefeated against Chicago in five games this season and increased Vancouver's lead over the second-place Hawks to three points in the Smythe Division.

"There were a few guys, including Sedlbauer, who didn't do too much the first two periods," Vancouver coach Harry Neale said after the 4-2 victory. "I really lit into a couple of them before the last period."

"Sedlbauer's one of those guys who floats around in some kind of a trance for a couple of periods, but he has the talent and size to win a game for you in one period, and that's what he did. He reacted positively to criticism between periods and had the right kind of attitude when it counted."

The goal was Sedlbauer's 18th in 27 games, including 12 in Vancouver's last 11 games, equalling his output over 62 games last season.

Pit Martin, scoreless in 21 straight games, fired the first Vancouver goal, while Stan Mikita, on a power play, and J. Bob Kelly scored for Chicago.

Vancouver now has won three times and tied twice against the Hawks this season as Neale stresses games against other clubs in the Smythe Division where Vancouver has a 7-1-2 record.

The Canucks, with rookie Glen Hanlon providing stellar netminding, are 6-1-1 in their last eight games, but face seven road games in their next 10 starts.

The Hawks lost right winger J. P. Bordeleau with a groin injury in the first period, while Vancouver played without rookie defenceman Lars Lindgren, sidelined with the flu.

Meanwhile, New York Rangers' coach Fred Shero said he has some fond feelings for the Flyers, having coached in Philadelphia before moving to New York.

But when it comes to hockey, Shero said, he'll take the victories wherever he can find them.

"Sure I'd rather beat the Islanders or Atlanta in our division, but I'll take the two points," Shero said after the Rangers' 5-2 triumph over the Flyers.

The win boosted the Rangers into second place in the Patrick Division, three points behind the Islanders. Philadelphia remains last, seven points behind the Islanders.

The Rangers clinched the game in the third period when Ron Greschner and Walter Tkaczuk scored goals 30 seconds apart.

In other games, Los Angeles Kings tied Buffalo Sabres 3-3, Boston Bruins edged Detroit Red Wings 6-5 and the Islanders defeated St. Louis Blues 7-1.

Jean Ratelle scored one goal as the second period drew to a close and added another, his ninth, in the second period to extend Boston's unbeaten streak to 10 games and move the Bruins nine points ahead of the idle Toronto Maple Leafs in the Adams Division.

The Bruins played without defenceman Brad Park, who injured a knee in pre-game practice and didn't play.

Bryan Trottier tied a club record of most points in a single game with two goals and three assists, and Mike Bossy scored three goals as the Islanders ran their unbeaten streak to 11 games.

Buffalo came from behind twice to give newly-appointed interim coach Billy Inglis a point in his initial outing. The broke a three-game losing streak for Buffalo.

CANADIENS WITHOUT LEMAIRE

MONTREAL (CP) — Centre Jacques Lemaire has joined the ranks of disabled Montreal Canadiens after suffering a dislocated left shoulder Wednesday against the Red Wings at Detroit.

The National Hockey League team announced earlier that right winger Yvan Cournoyer will undergo surgery to remove a disc in his lower back in January.

Lemaire will be out of action for six weeks. His left arm will be strapped to his chest for four weeks and two weeks of physiotherapy will follow, doctors advised the NHL team.

The Canadiens also said defenceman Guy Lapointe and forwards Doug Risebrough and Pierre Larouche all will be out of action this weekend with varied minor injuries.

KAMLOOPS JUNIORS PACK IT IN

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Financial troubles are forcing Kamloops Rockets of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League to fold, the club's owner said Wednesday.

"It would take $35,000 to finish out the season and I just don't have it," said Jim Mullis. The team already has lost $20,000 this season.

Rockets are scheduled to play Penticton Vees here tonight, but Mullis said he doubts the team will play.

Mullis also said he had asked Ephraim Steinke, the club's former owner, to attend a meeting Dec. 23 to discuss the club's future, but Steinke wasn't interested.

"We weren't willing to run the club past Dec. 23 unless Steinke was willing to return or unless we had new financial backing," Mullis said. "Now he has indicated he won't return and there is no way anyone would invest in the team after that."

Steinke currently holds the majority interest in Seattle Breakers of the Western League.

Mullis said the Rockets have been advised not to move any of their 19 players until the Tier Two league can consider a draft.

The team has won 15 of 31 games and is tied for second place with Vernon Canadians in the Interior Division.

Travelling in Style, Bruins Pass Cats

Times News Services

New Westminster Bruins finally have put a good travelling act together and the defending champions have forged into second place, one point ahead of Victoria Cougars, in the Western Hockey League's Western Division.

Winners of only one of their first 11 road games, the Bruins now are undefeated in their last five away starts.

The turnaround continued in Medicine Hat when the Bruins racked up a 7-5 victory Thursday.

In Thursday's only other game, Brandon Wheat Kings ran their undefeated string to 29 with a 4-1 victory over Saskatoon Blades. The Kings now are a whopping 28 points ahead of Saskatoon in the Eastern Division.

The Bruins wrap up their Prairie jaunt in Calgary tonight, then return to New Westminster to face Victoria on Sunday. The Cougars make their next start Saturday at Memorial Arena against the Western Division-leading Portland Winter Hawks.

Three goals in a span of 2½ minutes in the final period enabled the Bruins to subdue the stubborn Tigers.

Lacroix Caps Whaler Surge

By Canadian Press

"I was just praying that Andy would put it in," said Rick Ley after New England Whalers scored three goals in the last four minutes to beat Edmonton Oilers, 5-3.

Andy, better known as centre Andre Lacroix, took a thread-the-needle pass from Ley at the blue line and beat Edmonton goalie Dave Dryden with a backhanded shot with 1:35 remaining for what proved to be the winning goal in the World Hockey Association contest Thursday.

"I saw him cutting in from the left boards, so I shot the puck to where I thought he'd be. Andy did the rest," Ley added.

In other WHA contests Birmingham Bulls defeated Cincinnati Stingers 4-2 and Winnipeg Jets dumped Indianapolis Racers, 9-1.

Edmonton held a 3-2 lead in the final period and oddly enough began to open up the play.

"They really surprised me," said Whalers coach

Bill Dineen. "I thought they'd play cautious."

Just a Quick Hello, And Then Izvestia

TORONTO (CP) — The collection of National Hockey League fringe players and minor leaguers who will represent Canada in the Izvestia tournament will have time only to say hello to each other before departing for Europe next week.

General manager Bill Watters said Friday the team's first practice will be in Stockholm on Tuesday. Three more practice sessions and an exhibition game against a Swedish team are scheduled before Team NHL proceeds to Moscow for the Izvestia Cup tournament starting Dec. 16.

In Moscow, the NHL squad faces national teams from the host Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Finland and Sweden.

Watters announced Friday the name of one more player — defenceman Miles Zaharko — who was added to the roster of 19.

Marshall Johnston is coach of the team that will gather here for the first time Monday before leaving for Stockholm.

Zaharko, an Atlanta Flames defenceman playing this year with Tulsa in the Central Hockey League, joins two other Atlanta players on Team NHL. New York Islanders also contributed three players. Four NHL teams — Buffalo Sabres, Los Angeles Kings, Vancouver Canucks and Washington Capitals — did not provide any.

Goal Doug Soetaert, New York Rangers; Goran Hopola, New York Islanders (Fort Worth, CHL).

Defence Miles Zaharko, Atlanta Flames (Tulsa, CHL); Tom Price, Pittsburgh Penguins (Birmingham, AHL); Bob Neely, Toronto Maple Leafs (New Brunswick, AHL); Bob Lorrimer, New York Islanders (Terry Murray, Philadelphia Flyers (Maine, AHL); Jean Hamel, Detroit Red Wings (Centre).

Rich Hansen, New York Islanders (New Brunswick, AHL); Ron Andruff, Colorado Rockies (Philadelphia, AHL); Jean Savard, Chicago Black Hawks (New Brunswick, AHL); Kris Maney, Minnesota North Stars (Oklahoma, CHL).

Left Wing Gene Carr, Atlanta Flames; Lorne Stampler, Toronto Maple Leafs; Normand Dugout, Montreal Canadiens (Nova Scotia, AHL); Bob Simpson, Atlanta Flames (Tulsa, CHL).

Right Wing Dwight Foster, Boston Bruins; Tom Gorence, Philadelphia Flyers (Maine, AHL); Eddie Johnstone, New York Rangers; Tony Currie, St. Louis Blues (Salt Lake City, CHL).

The Izvestia tournament schedule has Team NHL facing Finland on Dec. 16, Czechoslovakia on Dec. 17, the Soviet Union on Dec. 19 and Sweden on Dec. 21.

CANADIANS BATTLE TO SCORELESS TIE

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (CP) — Canada and the United States played to a 0-0 draw before more than 33,000 spectators in the first game Thursday of the semi-final round at the North, Central American and Caribbean youth soccer championship.

Canada is in one semi-final group with the U.S., Honduras and Trinidad. Four other Central American teams are in the other semi-final group. The winners of the two groups advance to the final to battle for a place in the World Youth Cup in Japan next August. In the other game in Canada's group, Honduras beat Trinidad 3-0.

Goalkeeper Chris Turner of Surrey earned the shutout for the Canadian team, which was robbed of three excellent scoring chances by the U.S. goalie.

Canada's next game is on Sunday against Honduras. The U.S. plays Trinidad.

Esquimalt Unbeaten

MISSION — Esquimalt, Victoria High and Nanaimo all advanced to the championship round of the B.C. high school boys' volleyball championship during preliminary play here Thursday.

Esquimalt came up with a 3-0 record — beating Williams Lake 2-1, North Delta 2-0 and Kitimat 2-0 — to top Division "B".

Vic High and McNair of Delta emerged on top of Division "A" with 2-1 records and Nanaimo placed second in Division "C" behind unbeaten KLO of Kelowna.

Williams Lake, Prince George and Caledonia of Terrace also advanced to the championship round with two wins and one loss.

The other eight teams in the 16-team tournament, including defending champion Mission, were relegated to the consolation round.

The top eight schools were scheduled to meet in another round-robin series today to determine the seedings for a double-knock-out final round Saturday.

Expansion Deferred

HOMOSASSA SPRINGS, Fla. (GP) — The National Hockey League board of governors meetings ended Thursday with the matter of expansion deferred until their February meetings in New York.

A spokesman for the NHL said there were still a number of problems to sort out before any firm decision was forthcoming on expansion, through the addition of several World Hockey Association teams and acceptance of a franchise for the 20,000-seat Meadowlands Arena in New Jersey, scheduled to open in late 1980.

"The questions still to be resolved are primarily concerning the Meadowlands operation," the spokesman said. They dealt with territorial, cable and television rights.

An NHL franchise at the Meadowlands would mean three league teams within 30 miles of one another with Philadelphia Flyers 70 miles away and New England Whalers, a WHA franchise expected to be included in expansion, just 110 miles.

Deepest Fishing Lines Yield Most Chinooks

Some fairly good fishing for winter chinook salmon is still available in a number of Vancouver Island areas — but successful fishermen are going right to the bottom.

"Loads" of chinooks to 13 pounds have been landed off Secretary Island and the Sooke Buys using hootchies (incorporating the color blue) or minnows.

Action has slowed down slightly at Beecher Bay but fair catches of chinooks continue to come in off Beechey Head and in Whirl Bay.

Gordie Strongman boated the heaviest catch of the wee Wednesday morning when he hauled in a 20-pounder on a blue-green Squirt off the Head.

Pedder Bay reports indicate some of the chinooks (to 12 pounds) have moved out but enough remain to provide a few limits between Christopher Point and Church Rock.

The best tactic has been to troll white hootchies or minnows with two to three pounds of weight and 150 to 200 feet of line. Buzz-bombers, too, have been connecting.

Bluebacks in the one-to-two pound range have been taken off the Pedder Bay kelp using minnows, one pound of weight and 60 feet of line.

Action has slowed down slightly off Oak Bay but a few good catches of chinooks to 10 pounds are turning up off Trial and Discovery islands. Hootchies and bait are catching the most fish.

Sidney fishermen are enjoying better — but still slow — success. Coal Island waters are yielding chinooks to nine pounds on strip or minnow and the channel between Saanichton Spit and James Island is producing chinooks to 14 pounds on strip. Squirts or hootchies.

Tom Mack spoons, trolled about 150 feet in depth, are producing a few chinooks to four pounds off Wain Rock.

Bamberton, Indian Bay, The Boulder and Senanus Island waters are yielding chinooks to five pounds, mainly on bait.

A few chinooks to six pounds are showing in Finlayson Arm.

Further up-island, fishermen are catching a few chinooks to 10 pounds by trolling Krippled K spoons or strip off Bold Bluff.

Five Fingers Island area is producing numerous chinooks to seven pounds and similar returns were noted off the Harmae wharf and in Northwest Bay. Strip — either trolled or strip-cast — has been the top bait.

Early morning fishermen are landing fair numbers of chinooks to 12 pounds off Comox on drift-fishing gear worked near the bottom.

Duncan Bay appears to be the best spot off Campbell River for chinooks to 12 pounds. Fish with strip at the 40-foot depth.

Steelhead continue to trickle in from the Cowichan, Mass, Franklin, Campbell and Gold systems. One steelie taken in the Gold tipped the scales at 24 pounds.

NIBBLES: Pedder Bay's third annual Winter Spring derby starts Saturday and continues through to Dec. 31. The Joe Smith Perpetual Trophy and about $1,200 in prizes are up for grabs and any fisherman purchasing at least $2 worth of gear at the marina is eligible to enter.

Skiers will be happy to note all the steel for the first T-Bar at Mt. Arrowsmith is now up and the operators are pouring concrete for the second T-Bar, which will reach close to the top of Cokely Ridge.

Federal fisheries is emphasizing native-run projects in the Salmonid Enhancement Program. The Kispiox band at Hazelton recently received $29,688 for a chinook incubation project on the Kispiox River. And the Chehalis band of Harrison Mills collected $205,182 for stream rehabilitation and enumeration of spawning chums in the Harrison River area.

Copper, Plus Prayers

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Chi Chi Rodriguez had just shot a three-under-par 69 in the first round of the inaugural $210,000 Mexico Cup golf tournament when he pulled a copper bracelet off his left wrist.

"Sometimes copper is worth more than gold," said the joyful Puerto Rican golfer who led the tournament for a few moments before David Graham of Australia turned in a six-under-par 66 on the 7,238-yard course in southern Mexico City.

"I've had a bad pain in my shoulder," said Rodriguez. "It was so bad I could hardly move my left shoulder. But my mother and my wife bought me this copper bracelet yesterday and I feel fine today."

Rodriguez said there may have been some power other than the copper in the 95-cent bracelet that helped his shoulder.

"My mother has been praying. We believe in miracles. She went to the shrine of the Virgin of Guadalupe to pray for me, so maybe her prayers did more than the copper. But I can move my shoulder now."

Graham held a two-stroke lead over Don January, Bob Byman and Tsunryuki Nakajima of Japan, all at 68, going into today's second round.

Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino and Billy Casper, the pre-tournament favorites, were back in the pack. Nicklaus shot 75, Trevino 73 and Casper 71.

The international field of 47 professionals and seven amateurs found the course playing shorter than its marked yardage because the ball carries better in the thin air.

Leonard Thompson and Bobby Wadkins finished the first round of the 72-hole tournament two under par at 70, while Mexico's Carlos Perez Acosta was tied at 71 with Casper.

The tournament, the richest ever held in Latin America, is expected to become a yearly fixture.

Loos Just Starting To Find the Range

Victoria DataTech basketball club is off to its best start ever even though Billy Loos is only beginning to reach his potential.

Most players would be more than satisfied with Loos' production of 24.6 points per game against senior "A" competition but the 1977 Canada West University scoring champion wasn't satisfied with his play through DataTech's eight-game pre-season schedule.

Loos shot 46.9 per cent for the eight exhibition games but when things got serious and league play started he showed he could easily outdo that credible figure by firing a sparkling 60 per cent.

The shooting and rebounding of Loos, Varick Cutler and Mike Gains led DataTech to a sweep of the opening doubleheader against Yakima City last weekend.

Loos played most of the way at guard against Yakima and coach Walt Burrows will probably start him there this weekend when DataTech hosts Renton Roadrunners for a Northwest International League doubleheader.

The teams meet at 8:30 p.m. Saturday and 1 p.m. Sunday at Central Junior High School. There will be preliminary games both days with Victoria Home Lumber meeting Vancouver Critters in a senior "A" women's exhibition at 6:30 Saturday and Shanwigan Lake playing Victoria in a bantam boys game at 11:45 a.m. Sunday.

For the first time in a month Burrows will have most of his regulars dressed. Jim Duddridge is back from his honeymoon, Brian Brumwell and Mike Gains are recovered from ankle ailments, Brian MacKenzie has recuperated from a leg injury and Dave Mulcahy is over his back problems.

Loos, Cutler, Bob Burrows, Ken Shields, Chris Hall, and Brent Mullins are also ready. Dave Morgan, who coaches Oak Bay Bays, and Tom Sinnott, who has an ear infection, are the only doubtful starters.

Hadl With Hawks

LAWRENCE, Ka. (AP) — John Hadl, former star quarterback for San Diego Chargers, Los Angeles Rams, Green Bay Packers and Houston Oilers, has returned to his alma mater, taking the position of offensive co-ordinator with the University of Kansas Jayhawks.

EMMY, PETE CLICK WITH 600 SERIES

Emmy Plesch and Pete Dragicevich topped the 600-plateau and captured tenpin awards during the ninth week of the 16th annual Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Emmy collected women's laurels with a steadily ascending 173-213-219 — 605 series in the Women's Classic League at Mayfair Lanes.

A massive 243 effort followed by games of 222 and 214 gave Pete men's honors with a 679 series in the Wednesday Men's Tenpin League at Duncan Lanes.

Skillings Splits

EDMONTON (CP) — Paul Gowsell, the demonstrative skip of the world junior curling champions from Calgary, won two squeakers to remain undefeated in the six-day, $60,000 World Open Tournament of Champions bonspiel Thursday.

Gowsell beat Edmonton's Keith Daly 9-8 in the first round and Victoria's Steve Skillings 7-4 in the second.

Robb King of Edmonton, 1974 and 1975 Canadian schoolboys champion, who lost the 1975 world junior final in an extra end, also won twice, beating Dean Jacula of Vermilion, Alta., 10-6 and Ken Watson of Edmonton 4-3.

Defending champion John Reed of Edmonton also cleared the first two hurdles in the triple-knockout qualifying section, which will whittle the 64 rinks down to 16 for a double-knockout playoff to decide the four semi-finalists.

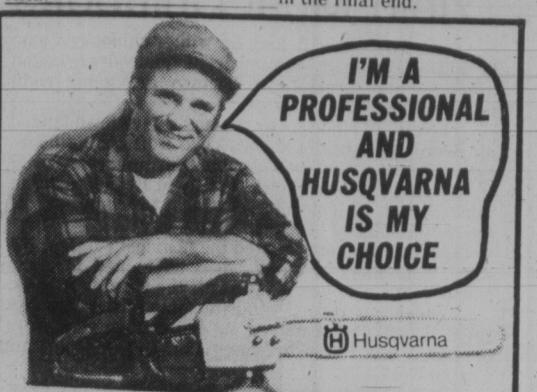

Reed edged Al Wilson of Edmonton 9-8 and Vancouver's Greg Hillson 6-5.

The bonspiel's two European entries are both on the ropes after back-to-back losses and face elimination if they lose again.

The Scottish rink of three-time Silver Broom competitor Bill Muirhead dropped a 7-4 decision to Winnipeg's Mike Riley, then lost 11-5 to Kirk Ziola of Regina. The Peter Attinger rink of Switzerland fell 11-2 to Red Deer's Roy Talbot and 6-5 to Marv Schmidt of Leduc, Alta.

The youthful Skillings rink won its first start by defeating Morley Bullock of Saskatoon 10-4 in the opening round. Skillings' game against Gowsell was in doubt until the Victoria skip missed his last shot in the final end.

Bond's 'Mr. Tenacity'

It's impossible not to admire the tenacity of Australia businessman Alan Bond in his desire to have the "down-unders" become the first ones to ever wrestle the America's Cup away from the United States.

Bond, who headed unsuccessful challenge teams in 1974 and 1977, is going to try his luck again in 1980.

Bond says he intends to rebuild the 12-metre Australia and Ben Lexcen, her co-designer, will be in charge of the redesign work.

The aluminum Australia, which lost four straight races off Newport in 1977, will have modifications made to her keel and stern area. The cost is expected to be about $420,000.

Here's hoping the third time around Bond will be able to break the American stranglehold on America's Cup competition, making history in the process.

Light easterlies that eventually turned into sou'westerlies challenged the large sailing fleet that took part in the Royal Victoria Yacht Club's 15-miler on Sunday. Jan Huibers' Sea Spell was over-all winner in division I while Dick Readshaw's Massilia II headed the division 2 boats.

Finishing after Sea Spell were Tom Loney's Goodbye, Tom Hawker's Pac, Eric Dowell's Shelca, Greg Oliver's The Distant Drummer, Steve Merriman's Country Style, Fred Gardner's Tringa, Jack Woodward's Puff II, Hugh Porter's Errigal, George Cesarec's Galeb, Hugh Bacon's Encounter, Bill Craig's Ailsa Craig, Murray Farmer's Seeker, Archie Campbell's Sea Robin and R. Smith's Finesse.

After Massilia II came Peter Young's Spice, Ron Saunders' Irrawaddy, Bill Hingley's Quintango, Keijo Isomaa's Vandal, J.F. Colwell's Flying Lady, Larry Shorter's Kila Kila, Frank Piddington and Sid Bryant's Knotsure, Roy Hingley's Romada, Sandy McMillan's Amber Green, B. Dean's Libre, Tony Sheridan's Mereful, Gerry Howell-Jones's Sian, Bob Van Den Driesche's Noosa, Rod McBride's Lemolo and R.T. McKean's Encore.

Twelve Cal 20s turned out for the fleet's fifth around-the-buoy race in its winter series on Sunday, the first boat to go over the finish line being Peter Coy's Kittiwake. She edged out Peter Harrison's Sunbeam, B. Humphrey's Oookpik, Ward Palmer's Calindigo, Peter Fisher's Klehanie and Ed Life's Semiramis.

Twenty of RVYC's dinghy sailors were able to get two series races finished on Saturday before the wind ran out, forcing the final race to be scrubbed. Bob Britten won the first race, runners-up being Dave Richardson and Kim Hellwig. The second time around Jim Allen finished in top spot, being on Sunday for an excursion on Quamichan Lake near Duncan.

Because of decreasing hours of light an early start will be the order of the day. Members should be ready to leave the rendezvous spot, which is the telephone booth on the Island Highway near Goldstream Park, at 10 a.m.

It was great to be able to take in the club's annual Christmas potluck-supper and slide competition this week. Judging by the calibre of the color slides shown that evening the members are as adept with a shutter as they are at handling a paddle.

Before the Judge

A 26-year-old Saanich man pleaded guilty in provincial court Thursday to possessing heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

Gary Keith Sawin, 273 Lovat, first appeared before Judge Fred Green on Nov. 30 when defence lawyer Lenore Boyes elected trial by judge without jury. Sawin was denied bail then and a preliminary hearing date of Jan. 12 was fixed last Wednesday.

But on Thursday Boyes re-elected trial by magistrate and entered the guilty plea. Allegations made during Sawin's initial court appearance were that one ounce of pure heroin and more than $8,000 in cash were found in his home.

Crown counsel George Jones said the heroin could be broken down to between 450 and 500 "caps" which would sell for $15 to $50 each.

Green refused an application for Sawin's release while a pre-sentence report is prepared, and remanded Sawin to Dec. 19 for the report and sentencing.

Green imposed a six-month jail term on a 23-year-old Ladysmith man who forged his mother's signature on two cheques, and on his brother's paycheque. Mathew Barry Roberts was also placed on six months' probation and ordered to make restitution to his mother and brother.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said Roberts signed his mother's name to cheques for $110 and $105 to Safeway on July 28 and Aug. 13. He also went to his brother's place of employment, told employees he was authorized to pick up his brother's cheque and signed his brother's name and received $260.49 cash while depositing $50 in his brother's bank account.

Green said a term of imprisonment was called for because of Roberts' previous criminal record which included convictions for false pretences, theft over $200 and two counts of possession of stolen property since March, 18, 1976.

Laughton noted that Roberts had received three suspended sentences previously and the only jail terms were two, concurrent sentences of 10 months imposed on Oct. 12, 1977, in Edmonton for the two counts of possession of stolen property.

The judge also stated he would recommend work release for Roberts.

guilty to siphoning gasoline Nov. 21 in Central Saanich.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan said residents along Wallace Drive complained to Central Saanich police about youths siphoning gasoline in the early evening. Police caught Russell as he was leaving 2143 Newman but Walker ran from the scene. He later telephoned police and admitted his part in the siphoning, Mulligan added.

Court was also told $310 damages were done to the driveway of the Newman Road residence during the offence.

When Green asked the pair why they did it, Walker replied, "We wanted to go cruising around town and we didn't have any money."

Russell, who is unemployed, was given a suspended sentence, placed on six months' probation, ordered to perform 75 hours of community service work, and also ordered to make restitution for half the damages.

Walker, who is employed, was fined $100, placed on six months' probation, and also ordered to pay for half the damages.

To Go North, Go South

Ald Bob Wright of Victoria is one politician who knows where he's going — it's just how to get there that is so frustrating.

Wright told city council's traffic committee every time he tries to drive one way in Victoria, he finds himself headed in the opposite direction by one-way streets.

"If you want to go north, you go south and if you want to go east you go west," complained Wright.

"It's all a great conspiracy to get rid of the automobile!"

His outburst was prompted by a recommendation that the committee extend cement dividers on Blanshard to stop cars on Topaz from crossing the main thoroughfare.

Wright was against the move because traffic is already too restricted in the city.

The committee decided to give the matter further study.

SIAMESE TWINS TO VANCOUVER

Siamese twins born to a 20-year-old Duncan woman last week were transferred Thursday from Royal Jubilee Hospital to Vancouver General Hospital.

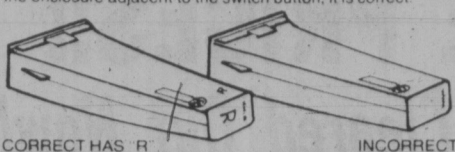

An RJH spokesman said the twins were taken by air ambulance for further tests to determine the safest way to separate them.

The twins, who weighed a total of about 10 pounds when born Nov. 28, are joined at the chest and abdomen.

★ He Helped Himself To Trouble

A 64-year-old Central Saanich man is probably convinced following his appearance in provincial court Thursday that nice guys DO finish last.

It all happened because Robert James Harris, of 9771 West Saanich, tried to be helpful to a Sidney RCMP officer.

The incident occurred Nov. 19 during the blustery weather which hit lower Vancouver Island.

The officer involved was called out at 1:30 a.m. to McDonald Park Road where a tree had fallen.

As the Mountie was finishing putting a chain around the obstacle, Harris drove up.

The officer flagged him down and asked Harris to tow the tree to the side of the road.

Harris agreed and the officer began directing him to back up into the right position.

To get a better idea of how he was doing, Harris opened his door and leaned out to get a better look.

But, the court heard, he leaned too far and fell out to the ground.

As a matter of fact, court was told, the vehicle ran over Harris' foot, luckily not causing any serious injuries.

The officer transported Harris back to the RCMP detachment in Sidney where breath test readings of .22 and .21 were obtained.

Harris pleaded guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08.

To Be Probed

A one-man board of inquiry will hold a hearing Jan. 16 into a claim by Robert Heerspink, 29, of 1290 Lands End in Sidney that the Insurance Corp. of B.C. cancelled his fire insurance because he had been charged with possession of marijuana.

Leon Getz, head of the B.C. Law Reform Commission, will conduct the hearing.

Shoppers Started Earlier, Spending More, Says CEC

A record Christmas shopping spree is under way as Victorians begin spending the money they made on a banner tourist season, Canadian Employment Centre local manager Wally Pickering said Thursday.

"They are starting earlier and spending more," he said. "Merchants expect revenues to be from 10 to 15 per cent higher than last Christmas."

He said Christmas buying was well under way by mid-November, backed by a strong advertising campaign.

Merchants reported a rush on toys, china, clothing, fashion accessories, leisure equipment and jewelry. Food processing machines have been a big gift item so far this season.

Pickering said the heavy early buying is evidence of prosperity in the local economy.

There were 104,000 Victorians working in October, up 10,000 from the number employed here at the same time in 1978. Many of these were in service industries and in jobs related to the tourist industry, which continues to be stronger than last year.

Pickering said the momentum should carry through into January and, while a late winter slump is normal, it might not be as bad as in recent years.

The weather would be a big factor in January. Some logging layoffs have already begun for the Christmas season but these workers could be back on the job early in January if the weather is reasonable.

The economy will continue to be bolstered by activity in sawmills and there is a good supply of logs on hand to carry through until loggers return to work.

A survey by CEC information officer Dan Bowes showed all sectors of the economy doing fairly well, with the exception of construction.

many potential projects. The supply of apartments and retail space is considered more than adequate.

The real estate market is level-to-slightly-improved. In November there were 170 units sold through the Multiple Listing Service for a total value of $10 million, compared with 170 units worth $9.5 million in the same month last year.

The tourist industry reported revenues down between five and 10 per cent from October but this was expected. Advance bookings for the holiday season have been strong and December should be a good tourist month.

Oakland Industries has hired 50 people to process herring and this work should continue into the new year.

Greenhouses report there is a good crop of holly and poinsettias. Demand for farm labor is low.

The Canadian weather-ship Quadra was expected to rendezvous this morning with the Greek tanker Evangelia which developed a cracked deck Thursday in the Pacific Ocean about 960 kilometres west of Victoria.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Centre said the Quadra will escort the 232-metre tanker until they are

The Evangelia, with a crew of 30 — Greek, Columbian and Pakistani — was bound for Korea to be scrapped when its captain sent out a distress call, reporting a three-metre crack across the main deck.

Two C-130 Hercules planes from Anchorage, Alaska, reached the tanker late Thursday.

An Argus aircraft from CFB Comox was also dispatched but later resumed its regular patrol off the B.C. coast.

The large merchant vessel Arco Juneau detoured to the scene and stood by as the Evangelia turned around and started back for Seattle. Another freighter in the area, the Quin Tina, took over the escort at about 9 p.m. and remained until the arrival of the Quadra.

TEAC A-103

Designing and producing quality tape-recording equipment is TEAC's specialty. And the A-103 is proof that quality does not have to be sacrificed in a budget-priced deck. The A-103 was designed with the same philosophy and advanced technology developed for more expensive models. For example, its transport mechanism is the same type as that employed on the A-303. It also incorporates an FG servo-controlled DC motor for superior stability and accuracy. The Dolby noise-reduction system featured on the A-103 is behind its component-level sound, found on few other decks in this price range. In other words, the A-103 is a deck that looks great and sounds even better.

Missoni knits: a form of art

Torrid Color For Spring

By BERNADINE MORRIS
New York Times

NEW YORK — The fashion people who swept into New York from stores all over the country to check out spring collections choked Seventh Avenue's elevators and showrooms. To accommodate them, designers took their collections to places like the Whitney Museum and Lincoln Center, thereby lending cultural overtones to the presentation of spring clothes.

Some primal urge to decorate the body is aroused by the vernal equinox and designers have been unusually responsive to it this time. The strongest response is through color, and the explosion of hot shades puts primroses and crocuses to shame. Violet pinks, violets and greens step out in all the collections.

Sexiness is another reaction and it can be argued that designers have responded too violently in this area. The prevalence of slits, fish-net stockings and bare-all décolletages has prompted the fashion merchants to talk among themselves of the tarty look and the hooker look and to wonder whether the brothel is the proper source of fashions for today's woman.

The best of the designers have avoided the trap and found ways for women to dress comfortably and cheerfully without looking like sex objects.

Rosita and Ottavio Missoni, the Italian knitters, whose clothes transcend fashion and approach art, showed their spring collection, appropriately, at the Whitney, along with a retrospective of their work of the past 25 years. The retrospective, staged by Colin Birch, was a rerun of the successful presentation in Milan six months ago.

To the credit of the Missonis, it wasn't easy to tell the new clothes from the old except when the hemline was a give-away. In fact, the 40 American mannequins who lined up at the entrance weren't sure whether they were wearing new ones or old ones.

The clothes all boasted the easy lines and glowing colors for which the couple are known. Those of the past were displayed against blowups of photographs and swatches of the knitted materials, which were framed like paintings. The models wore the new collection.

Wallpapering Can be Sticky Job

Doing your own wallpapering can be an enjoyable, money-saving project or an expensive and disappointing fiasco. How your decorating effort turns out depends in large measure on what you know before you buy.

First, know that if you haven't any papering tools or even a ladder, your first room is going to cost you a lot more than just the paper.

And the second most important consideration is to choose materials that you can handle as a novice. That can rule out grasscloth, some foils, thin, not pre-pasted papers, and other tricky installations that call for a professional. And if you have a room full of archways and dormers, recessed areas and dropped valances, I hope you count patience among your personal attributes.

If that hasn't discouraged you, read on. On your shopping list should be a few tools. You probably have long scissors, a measuring stick and string for a plumb line. If not, appropriate scissors will cost around $10, the stick should be free and a plumb line and chalk kit $2.39. You'll need plastic buckets for mixing sizing or glue if your paper's not pre-pasted. You should be able to get two small ones at 49¢ each. Check to see if you have a clean sponge, ($2.50) and a water tray for pre-pasted coverings, ($5). You might need patching plaster, $1.49, a paste brush, 79¢, a screw driver for removing switch plates, $2.49, and a drop cloth. A seam roller will help you press seams shut, $1.39. A razor knife with plenty of blades is indispensable, $2.49, and so is a step ladder, $8-$11.

At this point in your planning you should start to tally up the costs. If this is your first papering job you might be kidding yourself that the total cost will be the price of the paper. If the room is small and you have few tools, buying the paper might be only half the cost. Apartment dwellers without a tool supply will have to borrow a level, brushes and a wall scraper. Or pay out another $15. If you haven't a raised working surface, borrow two card tables and put them together. Or get a roll of brown paper if you have to work on the floor.

What's in Store
Joan Watson

As beautiful as grasscloth is, I'd recommend you not buy it. It not only takes a pro to install it, but more important, light colors darken and dark colors fade.

A few years ago a friend had decorating advice for her home and as a result put parchment colored grass cloth all through the downstairs. This was a wonderful background to her pine furniture.

But slowly something happened. The cloth darkened and darkened until now it is a rather depressing, heavy almost brown straw look. The cloth was expensive. . . it now sells for $27 or $28 a roll and the average living room needs 15 to 18 rolls.

The other day she moved a mirror — the contrast was so great the move was impossible. She phoned a well-known wallpaper company and got some rather mixed advice. Yes, grasscloth changes color. . . colored cloths fade, the natural cloths darken. It was best to use it where no wall fixtures or pictures would be hung.

There seemed to be two views in that company about painting — the first girl said no, don't paint because the cloth would soak up a tremendous amount of material. On consulting with someone else in her office they suggested yes. . . it would be lovely but use two coats of latex. Again she was told any wallpaper can fade and with grasscloth, color often can deepen.

What was thought of by my friend as a really good investment on a fairly long-term base has now become an expensive disappointment. She is still deciding what to do.

The range of wall coverings available today is mind-boggling. The sample books will keep you busy for hours looking at everything from plain ceiling papers to co-ordinated papers and fabrics that give a total decorator effect. Vinyl wall covering is usually glossy and colorful. Some are pre-pasted, but if you choose a design that isn't, be sure to buy a special vinyl adhesive. Nothing else will do as there are several types. Ask the store whether you need powder, liquid or pre-mixed for the wall covering you've chosen.

Foil and mylars are not inexpensive and it's important to know that you need a perfect surface for them. They're delicate and take more skill to apply. Remember that foils conduct electricity if they happen to come into contact with exposed wires, so turn off the current when you're working around outlets and switches.

You might want to use a fabric or burlap instead of paper. You have to pre-shrink most fabrics; otherwise, when they dry they'll shrink on the wall. Ask for a special non-staining paste and try not to make the fabric too wet. You might be better off applying the paste to the wall instead of to the fabric. Do a test patch to make sure the excess paste will wash off without staining. In fact, unless you're quite experienced you might consider calling in a paper hanger if you're working with textiles not primarily designed for wall coverings.

Find Out Before You Leave

Tamara Pipa, a Toronto student, has just returned from a discouraging and expensive trip to France.

She learned the hard way about the importance of checking out thoroughly the formalities of foreign visas and entry requirements before leaving to study abroad.

Tamara wanted to take a French course and began last spring to contact schools in France about programs. She decided on one offered by the University of Nice. After being informed it could accept her for the four-month semester this fall, she went ahead and made her own travel arrangements.

Tamara received literature in French from the school with her acceptance. A member of her family visited the French tourist office for information on Nice itself. Then Tamara felt she was all set. Her flight was booked and the school knew she was coming. But last month when she arrived in Nice, her plans were shattered.

The first thing she was asked for at the school's enrolment office was her letter of acceptance, her passport and visa. This was the first indication she had that a visa was required — it's not for an ordinary visit of short duration.

But without one she was told she could not attend. A visit to the prefecture in Nice proved fruitless.

A cable to her family back home brought news that she might be able to obtain one in Geneva, so off she went to the French consulate there. Still no dice. They wanted proof that she could support herself financially in the form of a bank account, which she had not opened at that point, plus a medical certificate from home.

At that point, very discouraged, she returned to Paris where after a week of considering alternatives, she boarded a plane back to Canada.

It was a frustrating and expensive lesson and there were several Canadian students in the same situation at that same school this fall.

It's not the school's fault. It does mention in its literature that foreign students need special documentation but it doesn't use the word visa and the pertinent details are in French.

So, if you're planning to study abroad, here are a few guidelines.

Every country has the right to set its own entry requirements. Each country determines what the duration of a visit can be, and they can deny admission without any obligation to provide explanations.

If you're making your own travel arrangements, take the time to write to the embassy or consulate of the country you plan to visit before you leave Canada. Say how long you intend to stay.

Normally, to apply for a student visa, you must already have a letter of acceptance from a recognized institution. Tourist boards can be helpful, but since many tourists are only spending a short period in a country, under the duration that requires a visa, the subject may not come up or could be misunderstood.

This can happen especially with Western European countries where visas are usually not required for visits under three months. If you want to do some checking yourself on specific foreign admission formalities, there is a book you can consult at CP Air's ticket office, and many travel agencies, known as the Travel Information Manual (TIM). It's a good place to start. It's published monthly, with the information provided by the major airlines.

If you need the addresses of foreign embassies and consulates in Canada, try your regional passport office, travel agent or library. Ask for the book, Diplomatic Corps and Consular and Other Representatives in Canada. If you want your own copy contact Supply and Services Canada. It can supply you one for $2 or give you a name of a bookstore in your area which carries it.

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C. V8W 2N1.

Dear Mr. Vichert:

I am a 16-year-old girl. My problem is that I have never had a boyfriend, and it depresses me. People tell me I am good-looking, and I dress nicely. I have friends of both sexes, but no close friends who are guys. It bothers me the most when I see other girls who are not very good-looking or don't dress that well, going around with a guy. Can you give me some advice as to what I should do, because it gets me down a lot.

ANSWER: It is hard for me to believe you will not have a boyfriend soon. Being careful of your physical appearance, and having a variety of friends certainly increases your potential to attract the interest of a boy. The area that I would suggest you think about is how much energy you are spending worrying about yourself and your lack of boyfriend, and how much energy you are spending being genuinely interested in your friends and the events that are happening around you.

Often, too self-centred a focus can discourage people from becoming interested because they feel that there isn't room enough for them.

If it is possible for you not to care whether or not you have a boyfriend at this point, and enthusiastically enjoy the things that you are doing, and the people that you know, you may find that you are going to be asked for more dates.

Dear Dr. Powell:

I am 11 years old and my problem is that I'm underweight by about 20 pounds for my height. I have now developed a habit of eating so much that I feel guilty. Even if I eat tons of fattening snacks between meals and at night, along with my average regular meals, I am like a skeleton. Now I am afraid eating so much is doing me harm. Is that true?

ANSWER: There are a great many people who would not consider that you have a problem. They might envy you. However, feeling guilty will not solve your eating habits. The fact you can eat anything you want does not guarantee that your diet includes all the nutrients you require.

My advice is to obtain a copy of Canada's Food Guide from your school nurse or your local public health department and make sure your basic diet includes the recommended foods from each group.

If you still want to eat some of the extras you enjoy and you can do it without gaining weight, go ahead and stop feeling guilty.

All your friends will envy you but you will not be doing yourself any harm.

Dear Dr. Cotter:

I am 14 years old and since I was 11 I have been in three treatment homes for emotionally disturbed children. I was there because when I was 9 my parents separated.

Now I am living at home and my mom has filed for divorce. My problem is every time we get into an argument she brings up my dad and that I take drugs and alcohol. I can see her concern about my taking drugs and alcohol but I can't see why she puts down my father. And it's always directed at me. The only thing I do is write to him.

ANSWER: Your mother is also emotionally disturbed, and she puts down your father because she is angry at him. She is also angry with you because you in some way represent him to her and do not seem to be entirely on her side.

I expect you feel some loyalty to your father and it hurts you to have him put down. Remember, she puts him down when the two of you are arguing. I expect you use some tricks to hurt her during an argument, so you must expect her to do the same.

Do you pity your mother? If you do, you will not let her way of hitting back at you trouble you so much. But don't tell her you pity her. Just try to love her, and make the best of a difficult situation.

Cancer Remedies Fail

your health

By L. L. Coleman, MD

Two members of my immediate family developed cancer. Both were given large amounts of chemicals. Neither one survived. My question is, "Why do they continue to give these drugs when the do not seem to be effective?" — Mr. L. T. T.

Dear Mr. T.: It is sad that the drugs and other techniques now available for the treatment of cancer are not always effective. Yet, in many instances, chemotherapy can produce remissions in patients who might otherwise not survive the ravages of this formidable disease.

There are a variety of cancerous tumors that can actually be cured, or kept under control. For example, acute lymphocytic leukemia, a form of cancer in children, has responded to some of the newer drugs. Children who might otherwise not have survived are alive because of the effects of chemotherapy.

An enormous amount of research has produced dozens of drugs which have a value against certain specific tumors. Oncologists (specialists in the use of chemicals against cancer), now have about 30 or 40 different drugs which have potential value in controlling the extension of cancerous disease. These drugs, when used in combination with surgery and radiation therapy, offer the greatest chance for control.

A new concept, known as "immune therapy," is the most recent light on the horizon for the control of malignant cells in the body.

world encyclopaedias, side-by-side with the seven wonders of the ancient, modern and natural worlds, another set that's in the making right now.

I discovered this interesting fact in an article that appeared in a mid-November Christian Science Monitor.

elizabeth forbes

Written by a Boston man, Stephen Webbe, it explained that a start was made on this new list at a recent meeting in Washington, D.C., where the World Heritage Committee (WHC) of the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) drew up a list of 12 sites of either universal, cultural or natural importance to be preserved for all time.

The WHC had the right to do this because it had been named to carry out a World Heritage Convention, adopted by member states of UNESCO at its general conference in 1972.

There it was observed that the world's natural and cultural heritage is being increasingly threatened with destruction "not only by the traditional causes of decay but also by changing social and economic conditions."

The convention set up a World Heritage Fund, financed by contributions from signatory states, to assist in saving the threatened sites.

According to UNESCO, while each nation will continue to be responsible for the protection, conservation and presentation of the cultural and natural heritage (named by WHC) on its territory, this fund which is expected to stand at $675,000 by the end of the year, will give the WHC "the means to take firm and concerted action."

The United States was the first country to ratify the convention. Since then 39 other countries (including Canada) have followed suit.

The Monitor article explains that each site on the World Heritage list will be identified by a plaque explaining why it has been honored.

It also tells us that because only those sites within UNESCO member states that have ratified the convention are eligible for inclusion in the list, many famous buildings and regions are currently missing from it.

For instance, as India, Spain and Britain have yet to ratify, the Taj Mahal, the Alhambra and the Scottish Highlands are not included.

Two of the sites chosen by the WHC are in Canada.

The first is L'Anse-au-Loup National Historic Park on the northern tip of Newfoundland, an archaeological site that includes the remains of eight sod and wood structures dating from the 11th century — the only authenticated Norse settlement in the New World.

Second choice in Canada is Nahanni National Park in the southwest corner of the Northwest Territories. It includes the Mackenzie Mountains, river canyons, lakes, glacial features, hot springs and caves.

Also found there are some rare and endangered birds including trumpeter swans, golden and bald eagles and peregrine falcons.

Ten other sites are:

Wieliczka Salt Mines, Poland — These mines, about seven miles southeast of Krakow, have been worked since the 11th century and are still in operation.

Wawel Castle in Poland — It's described as "the architectural and historical centre of Krakow and perhaps the most outstanding feature in what ranks as one of the most remarkable artistic and cultural complexes in Europe."

Yellowstone National Park — It extends through Wyoming, Idaho and Montana in the United States.

Mesa Verde National Park — In the state of Colorado. "A cultural treasure that boasts dramatic remains of the Pueblo Indian culture that flourished in the United States from the 9th to the 13th century."

Ecuador's Galapagos Islands — These 19 volcanic islands lie across the equator and are best known for their marine and land iguanas and for the 1835 visit of Charles Darwin.

City of Quito, Ecuador — The oldest of all South American capitals, it contains a wealth of Spanish-American architecture.

Aachen Cathedral, West Germany — A mixture of Carolingian, Romanesque and Gothic, it was considered an architectural miracle by Charlemagne's contemporaries.

Island of Goree, Senegal — Commands the entrance to Dakar roadstead and is one of the earliest European settlements in West Africa.

Ethiopia's Rock-Hewn Churches — Some say these 11 churches, at a place called Lalibela, were chiselled from solid rock to form a "new Jerusalem" after the Muslim conquests halted Christian pilgrimages to the Holy Land. Many of the churches have badly deteriorated, the WHC says.

Simien National Park — Also in Ethiopia. "Human use of 80 per cent of the park, a spectacular mountain region, has caused denudation, serious gulley erosion and depletion of wildlife which includes the walla ibex, Simien fox and gelda baboon."

Unless you use boot trees regularly, your high leather boots flop over and eventually crease the leather. Boot trees cost about $4, but you save that much money by using tubes from rolls of gift wrap or paper towelling to hold the leather upright. Or, rolled newspaper held together with twine will give good support.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: For years I have suffered from an inferiority complex because of my height. It has ruined my whole life. I am a woman, 5 feet 9. I love to dance, but I'm taller than the average man and I feel like a fool when a man looks up at me.

I am uncomfortable unless I wear flats. I won't even walk to the coffee machine at work because I feel so conspicuous. I became so desperate I even asked my doctor if he knew of some kind of operation to shorten the bones in my legs, but he said no one has ever attempted such an operation. I told him I would be more than willing to be the first.

Abby, you can't imagine what a miserable feeling it is to walk into a room and pray to God that there is someone there taller than you are. Would you believe that I have even considered talking my life? I'm sure there are other girls who feel the same way.

Any advice you can give me will be appreciated. Don't tell me to see a psychiatrist because that is where my problem has already landed me.

TALL IN CANADA
DEAR TALL: Since you've already wisely consulted a psychiatrist, you must surely know that it's your attitude — not your altitude that needs changing.

You are much too self-centred in assuming all eyes are constantly focused on you. Not true. Instead of those negative feelings you have about your height, stand tall, throw your shoulders back, chin up, and come on proud, confident and alive. If you have two good arms, legs, eyes, a voice and a mind, thank God in your prayers.

HUMANE SOLUTION SOUGHT

solution to the labor problems that have shut his Times newspapers for an indefinite period.

"Above all we want to save the newspapers, even if it means going through a period of suffering," he said in an interview.

The Times and the Sunday Times simply could not go on facing the chronic delays and disruption that have resulted in some 13.2 million lost copies this year, he added.

Speaking almost in puzzlement and chagrin rather than anger, the 55-year-old Canadian publisher acknowledged that he had no instant formula for reconciling the 4,270 employees of the two newspapers to the technological revolution that he says is inevitable.

"It's partly psychological," he said. "But we feel a better understanding of what technological change involves will gradually come across to them.

"It is something positive, something that in the long run will be better for them. Somehow we have got to make them feel inwardly that this is the right thing to do."

Following management warnings, Times Newspapers Ltd. shut down the two papers on Nov. 30 after failure to reach agreement with the unions on curbing wildcat strikes, introducing computer type-setting and staff cuts.

70 Per Cent Vote At Namibia Polls

WINDHIEK (Reuters) — A South Africa-backed election in Namibia entered its fifth and final day today with jubilant officials claiming a turnout of at least 70 per cent.

"This demonstrates the will of the people to exercise their right to decide on their own future," South Africa's administrator general for the territory, Judge Martinus Steyn, told reporters.

Vote counting is expected to start Monday and the result may be known by the end of next week.

Other South African officials said the reported high turnout indicated voters were not deterred by a boycott of the election by the South-West Africa Peoples Organization (SWAPO), the main black nationalist movement in Namibia, also known as South-West Africa.

SWAPO leaders were detained under security laws at the start of the election, called by South Africa in defiance of the United Nations, which has deemed it null and void.

South Africa governs the territory under a League of Nations mandate, since revoked by the United Nations. The world body also recognizes SWAPO as the sole legitimate representative of the Namibian people.

The United Nations has called for elections supervised by the UN next year after a pullout of South African troops from the territory, a former German colony which South Africa captured during the First World War.

South Africa has said it will do its best to persuade the victors of the current election to co-operate with the United Nations in finding an internationally recognizable independence solution.

The Democratic Turnhalle Alliance (DTA) is regarded as certain of victory. It favors an ethnically based solution which would prevent SWAPO control.

The election is for a constituent assembly which will draw up a constitution.

S.A. THREATENS TO GAG PRESS

CAPE TOWN (Reuters) — Prime Minister Pieter Botha of South Africa issued a thinly-veiled threat of press censorship Thursday in the continuing furor over government misuse of secret funds.

"We are sick and tired of being represented as thugs," Botha said in his first appearance in parliament as prime minister.

"I want to warn those who continue to besmirch our public representatives that if they continue in this way they will unleash forces of which the end results cannot be seen."

He warned newspapers, which played a major part in uncovering the scandal, that they should not indulge in "trial by press."

Red Paint Bèspatters MPs

LONDON (UPI) — A pot of red paint brought business to a halt in the House of Commons Thursday and a key government debate had to be abandoned before it started.

A woman spectator in the public gallery capped a sticky evening of frayed tempers and raised voices by pitching a bundle of political leaflets and a pot of red paint into the august debating chamber.

Several members were splattered with red paint and the Speaker adjourned the house.

Rebels Suspect Somoza's Offer

MANAGUA (UPI) — Nicaraguan troops battled Sandinista guerrillas in the northern mountains in the worst fighting since the September civil war, killing 22 rebels, military sources said today.

President Anastasio Somoza Thursday announced a sweeping amnesty and an end to martial law in an attempt to ease Nicaragua's 11-month crisis, but opposition leaders refused immediate negotiations with him. They said Somoza already had broken too many promises and "we cannot really believe that Somoza is sincere."

The National Guard said it had "wiped out" three Sandinista Liberation Front bases, killing at least 12 guerrillas in the mountains 175 miles north of Managua.

Jonestown Agony Caught on Tape

JONESTOWN, Guyana (AP) — A tape recording has been found of part of the suicide-murder agony of more than 900 U.S. cultists at Jonestown, a Guyanese police official reports.

Cecil Roberts, assistant police commissioner for crime, said the tape of the Nov. 18 horror was found at the Peoples Temple settlement 250 kilometres northwest of Georgetown the morning after Guyanese troops arrived at the death camp. But he said the tape was not turned over to the police until recently.

The police official said the recording has been heard by only a few persons and to his knowledge it has not been copied. He said he has not heard it and has no other details.

Roberts said a total of about $1 million of Jonestown funds, most of it in $100 bills, has been found. He said about $500,000 was found hidden in the settlement, and another $500,000 was found in a suitcase in the jungle where a survivor abandoned it as he was escaping.

Unconfirmed reports have said up to $3 million was in the settlement.

Hamilton Green, Guyana's minister of health, housing and labor, said the government is considering proposals for disposal of the Jonestown tract, which the Peoples Temple leased and farmed.

He said the most obvious one is to continue farming it.

"Another idea is to keep it as a curiosity, something like a museum or tourist attraction."

Another possibility is to use the site as a military camp. Green said. The cultists put up scores of buildings, including cottages and dormitories.

China Birth Control Out of Hand?

CRIMINAL CODE CRITICIZED

By JOHN FRASER
The Globe and Mail

PEKING — A recent meeting of leading Chinese judicial figures has called upon the authorities to create a criminal code that will ensure "an absolute ban" on illegal arrests, searches without warrant, the extortion of confessions "through duress," frame-ups and perjury.

The Chinese jurists, who have been keeping a very low profile here for well over a decade, described such activities as "fascist methods" used against the people by the gang of four. An account of the meeting was carried in the People's Daily yesterday, which means that the government will be acting on the recommendations very shortly.

The jurists suggested that the drafting and enactment of a proper criminal and civil code as well as laws regulating legal procedure be done "as soon as possible."

As China enters into more and more trade contracts with Western countries, one of the most crucial areas for judicial initiative is in the area of international regulations. Internally, state corporations and co-operatives are in desperate need of legal procedures to protect their increasingly complex organization and plans.

CAPITALS 'SISTERS'

TOKYO (AP) — The Tokyo government says Peking has accepted its proposal that the two capitals become sister cities.

By JAY MATHEWS
Washington Post

HONG KONG — For the first time in years, China has reported a significant failure in its birth control program, indicating that new economic policies may actually be worsening the population crisis in the world's most populous nation.

An official radio broadcast from Kwangtung, the fifth-largest province in the country, said more than 100,000 births in excess of an official provincial plan were extended this year. Analysts here who have followed China's regular reports of birth control successes in the last decade said this was the first time the Chinese have reported a significant birth rate increase anywhere, indicating the seriousness of the failure.

The resurgence of births in Kwangtung closely follows implementation of new, nationwide rural policies promising more income to peasant families who do more work. This also provides an unintended incentive to produce bigger families. The policy may increase production of grain, but "the peasant will also say to himself, 'my family can really get ahead if I produce a lot of strong children,'" said one analyst.

The Chinese government is the first in history to try to administer nearly one billion people. If it does not reconcile its drive to increase food production with its need to reduce births, living standards are expected to stagnate or decline and modernization plans to be severely crippled.

A number of provincial and national conferences on the population problem have been held this year, including a national conference on population theory that just ended in Peking. The Kwangtung broadcast and some other articles have blamed lingering rural tradition for the failure to cut birth rates more quickly, but several recent articles criticizing officials for interfering too much in peasant life may also have contributed to failures such as Kwangtung's.

The articles chided officials for interfering with peasant decisions on what crops to plant. But they may also have discouraged local leaders from disciplining people who refused to practice birth control. In the past, families sometimes found free medical and other service might be denied to their third or fourth children, a harsh measure that contrasts with the new, relaxed atmosphere the post-Mao Chinese leadership is trying to encourage.

The Sunday broadcast from Kwangtung, monitored here, hinted at a conflict between birth control and other policies when it complained that "some places have set implementing the rural economic policies against implementing the policy of planned parenthood, and have relaxed leadership over this work."

THIEVES CHISEL LUXOR TEMPLE

CAIRO (AP) — Thieves have chiselled a priceless 3,200-year-old relief from one of Egypt's most popular tourist attractions, the temple of Pharaoh Amenhotep III at Luxor, archeological sources said Thursday.

Egyptian authorities are investigating the theft of the piece, estimated to be two metres long and one metre wide, and weighing about 500 pounds.

It depicts foreigners who had been conquered by the pharaoh — believed to be a grandfather of King Tutankamen — who reigned until-1372 B.C., the age of ancient Egypt's greatest splendor.

The theft was discovered Wednesday by an archeologist who noticed the section had been cut from the walls of the ancient Theban temple on the Nile River 650 kilometres south of Cairo.

"It appears to be the work of local thieves," said a source who asked not to be identified. From chippings found and other evidence at the scene, "it seems likely that they chopped the relief into pieces to cart it away."

Sources said the weight of the stone relief made it impossible for a single man to carry.

Antiquities experts say prices of stolen reliefs have soared in recent months because the Tutankamen exhibition-touring the world has aroused the passion of collectors.

The Golda Era: A Time of Bloody Struggle

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — In her time, Golda Meir was one of the most famous women in the world.

A bit stout in her later years, deep-voiced, her grey hair drawn into a bun, she was to many "the grandmother prime minister" — a nickname she didn't like — but it added something to the underdog image of the country she directed with a steel will.

Mrs. Meir was many things in her lifetime: schoolteacher in Milwaukee, swamp-draining kibbutznik in Palestine, director-general of the Histadrut Labor Federation, minister of labor, foreign minister, secretary-general of the Mapai (Labor) party, and prime minister from 1969 to 1974 as the Israel-Arab conflict reached a bloody peak.

Her political career stumbled on the public's dismay at her leadership in the 1973 Yom Kippur War. But by 1977 she had a warm meeting with President Anwar Sadat of Egypt, who plotted the surprise attack.

He gave her a cigarette case. She gave him a present for his new grandchild — "from a grandmother to a grandfather," she said, adding to an already historic event a touch that only Golda Meir could provide.

She was born Golda Mabovitch on May 3, 1898 in Kiev, Russia. She said one of her first memories was of her carpenter father nailing the windows and doors shut against a coming pogrom threatening death to Jews.

Her family escaped the pogroms, emigrating to the United States in 1906 and settling in Milwaukee where her father, Moshe, was a railroad worker. As a teenager she became interested in Zionism, the idea that Jews should have a state in their ancient homeland, Palestine.

At age 15, she met Morris Meyerson, a sign-painter, and "it was mutual love from the beginning." At 19 she became Golda Meyerson but their love had its troubles.

Morris was shy, introverted, a lover of music and literature, and no Zionist. Golda was a speech-maker and political enthusiast, convinced that her place was in Palestine helping to carve a country out of the rocky hills and swampy lowlands.

She taught fourth grade in Milwaukee for several years, then in 1921 Golda and the reluctant Morris sailed for the Middle East, where their marriage eventually foundered.

Their first home was Kibbutz Merhavia in the Jezreel Valley. Work started at dawn and ended at dusk, planting trees, tending chickens, draining the swamps.

As it turned out, Morris couldn't take kibbutz life, and they moved to Jerusalem where their children were born, Menahem in 1921 and Sarah in 1926. Now Golda was unhappy, not doing anything to advance the Zionist cause. She took her first political job in 1928, head of the Women's Labor Council.

It was hard on Morris and the children, for Golda started working with the eventual leaders of the Jewish state — David Ben-Gurion, Levi Eshkol, Moshe Sharett. They recognized her oratorical powers and dispatched her to the U.S. to raise funds and attract immigrants.

Her daughter Sarah recalled later: "We were always 'lonesome for mother, for we saw so little of her.' Golda and Morris officially separated in 1933. He died in 1951 while she was in the United States. Yet Golda always kept a photograph of Morris in her bedroom.

Her obsession was salvation for Jews, a people who in the 1930s were headed for Hitler's "final solution" to the "Jewish problem." In Palestine there was trouble too, with Arabs rioting and rampaging against the increasing Jewish presence in the Holy Land, then held by Britain as a mandate from the First World War.

The future brought the establishment of Israel and it was fated to fight four wars with its Arab neighbors.

Mrs. Meir's analysis: "The root of the problem is that our neighbors have never reconciled themselves to our existence."

"They say the Jews are the chosen people," she said. "We are — chosen to take all the knocks and beatings and then turn the other cheek." In later years the United Nations would condemn Israel for its heavy military reprisals, and Mrs. Meir responded bitterly: "The world hates a Jew who hits back. . . . The world loves us only when we are to be pitied."

The Jewish struggle against British rule in Palestine intensified, the Brit-

Mrs. Meir had left the foreign ministry, thinking of retirement but taking leadership of the Labor Socialist party, Mapai, where she remained a political power.

The party was splitting, however, and she had disagreements with Ben-Gurion and Moshe Dayan. Phlebitis (an inflammation of the veins) slowed her pace, and in 1968 she retired.

Then Prime Minister Levi Eshkol died in February, 1969, and Mrs. Meir was chosen to lead the government. Instead of fading away, Mrs. Meir became an institution, and as Israel's fourth prime minister, she was in office five years and 78 days. The so-called Golda Era was mostly happy days, a time of economic boom, military confidence, high immigration, improved relations with the United States.

But there were problems which the Meir government didn't rectify. The Socialist-directed boom didn't benefit the lower class, and Mrs. Meir's successor, Yitzhak Rabin, saw the Labor party, ridden with scandal, lose its first election in 1977 to the nationalist Likud bloc led by Menachem Begin.

Palestinian terrorists struck some hard blows, sowing tragedy in Israeli villages and in 1972 came the massacre of 11 Israeli athletes at the Olympics in Munich, West Germany. Mrs. Meir hit back equally hard, ordering cross-border retaliations, commando raids in Beirut, Lebanon, and assassinations of Palestinian guerrillas in Europe.

Mrs. Meir chain-smoked through the crises and drove her cabinet with flinty determination. At the same time she projected a motherly image by making omelettes for cabinet members.

The military confidence was an exaggeration, as Egypt and Syria attacked together in October, 1973, and forced initial Israeli retreats. Although the Israelis forced the Arabs back toward Cairo and Damascus, the country suffered higher casualties than in the 1956 and 1967 wars together and Mrs. Meir inevitably took the blame.

Again she wanted to retire as elections were held after the 1973 war, but the Labor party couldn't replace her. She stayed on and Labor won a narrow election victory, but she announced her resignation April 10, 1974, and left office June 13.

As the women's liberation movement gained steam, Mrs. Meir often was asked her views about being a woman in a job usually held by men. "I don't know, I've never been a male minister," she once snapped.

In a more thoughtful reply, she said: "I am not a great admirer of the kind of feminism that gives rise to bra-burning, hatred of men or a campaign against motherhood. . . . Naturally women should be treated as the equals of men. . . . I have lived and worked with men all my life, but being a woman has never hindered me in any way at all.

OFFICIAL
DELAY

OTTAWA (CP) — A scheduled Jan. 1 oil price increase that would have added three cents to the price of a gallon of gasoline or home-heating oil has been postponed until July 1, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said today.

Gillespie tabled in the Commons an exchange of letters between himself and Alberta Energy Minister Don Getty setting the terms for the new agreement negotiated two weeks ago.

In return for delaying the Jan. 1 increase, the governments agreed to add a further $1 a barrel—three-cent-a-gallon—increase for Jan. 1, 1980, provided it does not take domestic prices above those in the U.S.

As in all previous agreements between the two governments, consumer prices will not increase until 60 days after crude oil prices rise. The delay is designed to allow oil companies to use stocks of lower-priced products.

Charlotte Logging Protests Swell

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Twenty years ago nobody seemed to care how the forest resources of the Queen Charlotte Islands were managed.

There wasn't a murmur of protest when a huge forest empire was leased to the American-owned Rayonier (Canada) Ltd. with no strings attached.

But a public meeting at the Maritime Museum Thursday to discuss the renewal of the company's licence to log southern Moresby Island, situated on the southern end of the Queen Charlottes, showed times have changed in British Columbia.

The tenor of the meeting reflected an intense and growing interest in how B.C.'s land and resources are used and managed.

The discussion centred on a proposal to set aside southern Moresby as a wilderness area because of its unique natural and cultural significance.

The meeting was jammed with more than 200 people, including Rayonier officials, provincial and federal parks officials, naturalists, loggers, fishermen, conservationists, planners, biologists, sportsmen and businessmen representing the tourist industry.

The main speakers were members of a panel chaired by Dr. Murray Rankin, of the University of Victoria law faculty.

They were Andy Anderson, chief forester for Rayonier, Bristol Foster, director of ecological reserves, Gary Enden-shaw, representing the Islands Protection Committee and Ben Thompson, of the International Woodworkers of America.

Anderson said Rayonier is ready to make some concessions and to support a provincial park at the southern end of Moresby as well as set aside reserves to protect certain species of wildlife.

But he said the firm is opposed to the establishment of an ecological reserve at Windy Bay, an area which scientists want preserved in its entirety because of its unique plants and animals.

Foster argued the best use for the land would be to preserve it as wilderness since there is no other area like it in North America.

Once logged, he warned, its wilderness will be lost for ever.

"Wilderness is not a renewable resource."

"Trees may grow again but it will never be the same."

Foster said the land on Southern Moresby is thin and because of its topography, given to landslides.

Giscard?

PARIS (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau appeared annoyed and testy following a brief meeting with French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing today.

Trudeau's official itinerary indicated the two leaders were to meet for lunch and begin consultations at 3 p.m. Trudeau left at 3:05 p.m. Canadian officials said later the exact time the talks were to end had not been established beforehand.

"I have no comments," Trudeau told reporters as he left the Elysee palace.

However, Trudeau relented after considerable coaxing from the press corps.

A forthcoming meeting of the Big Four Western leaders at Guadeloupe in January was not discussed, Trudeau said.

Reports began circulating Thursday that Giscard d'Estaing had snubbed Trudeau by failing to invite him to the French colony. Trudeau's aides denied there was any snub.

But Trudeau appeared to be taking a parting diplomatic shot at the French president.

"We didn't speak of Guadeloupe, we spoke of Jamaica," he said, referring to a meeting called by Jamaican Prime Minister Michael Manley for later this month to discuss economic relations between 11 industrial and developing countries.

"That is an important summit; unfortunately, d'Estaing is not invited," he added sarcastically.

GRIEVING WIDOW of Toronto firefighter Donald Kerr is comforted by her brother-in-law Reginald at funeral Thursday in the Ontario capital of her husband and two other Toronto firefighters killed Monday fighting a blaze at Kimberly-Clark warehouse. Jumbo Slides

MONTREAL (UPI) — An Air Canada Boeing 747 jumbo jet carrying 270 persons slid off an icy runway at Dorval International Airport today but an airline spokesman said all aboard escaped injury.

The plane, flight 402 from Toronto carrying 258 passengers and a crew of 12, touched down on the runway at 9:22 a.m. EST but its wheels slipped on an "extremely icy patch" caused by several hours of freezing rain.

The Dorval control tower said the runway was closed for more than two hours following the incident but was reopened after the plane was towed away.

An Air Canada spokesman said no emergency evacuation procedures were required to remove the passengers. He said the plane nosed over slightly into a snowbank after rolling off the runway.

Preliminary examination indicated the damage caused to the plane was so slight that it may be put back into use later in the day, the spokesman said.

The flight was consolidating two Rapidair flights from Toronto to Montreal.

Keep 'em at Home
...With Leg irons!

OTTAWA (CP) — A Progressive Conservative MP offered the government a novel suggestion Thursday for getting citizens to vacation at home — handcuffs and leg irons.

John Crosbie (St. John's West) was questioning Industry Minister Jack Horner in the Commons on his plans to reduce the $1.4 billion tourism deficit the country has chalked up so far this year.

Figures released the previous day indicated the travel account suffered a $426 million deficit in the third quarter, bringing the deficit so far this year to a total of $1.387 billion.

Crosbie reminded Horner of his prediction last February that the 1978 travel account would come close to being in balance after a 1977 deficit of $1.7 billion.

Horner sent the Conservatives into spasms of laughter by taking the travel deficit for the last three years and announcing happily: "The growth in the deficit is definitely declining."

He said the government's efforts to get Canadians travelling in their own country has been a great success and he hopes to improve the program with more cheap charter flights if he can get the airlines to co-operate.

New Democratic leader Ed Broadbent offered this explanation for the government's apparent failure to make a dent in the country's tourism deficit.

"The more Canadians travel around and see the country, the less popular the Liberals become. Maybe there's some connection."

Since 1967 Canada has recorded deficits in its foreign travel account every quarter. This is one of the major factors in the $4 billion current account deficit expected for the year.

Latest figures on the current account, released this week, indicate the deficit had reached a seasonally adjusted $3.2 billion by the end of September.

The travel portion of the account registered a $426 million deficit in the last quarter and a $445 million deficit the previous quarter. Last year the total travel deficit was $1.7 billion.

Last February Horner announced an all-out campaign to try and reverse the traditional travel deficit.

Golda Meir Dies at 80

JERUSALEM — Former Prime Minister Golda Meir, the first lady of Israeli politics, died today in a Jerusalem hospital at the age of 80.

The immediate cause of death was not announced, but a hospital official said Mrs. Meir had suffered from malignant lymphoma, a cancer of the blood, for more than a decade.

Mrs. Meir died after more than three months in Hadassah Hospital. She had been released for the high Jewish holidays in October, but re-entered the hospital for the last time Oct. 29.

At first it was reported she was suffering from back trouble caused by a slipped disc, then that she had developed a viral infection and was being treated for jaundice — a liver condition in which bile pigments enter the blood and cause yellowing of body parts.

A hospital spokesman said details of her illness would not be discussed in detail until after the end of the Jewish sabbath Saturday.

As prime minister and head of the Labor party in 1969-74, she was the most prominent woman in Israel's public life. She led the country through the Arab-Israeli war of 1973 and peace moves afterward with Egypt and Syria that involved partial Israeli withdrawals in Sinai and on the Golan Heights. ICBC Verdict Next Week

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

The results of an investigation into allegations of an attempted "rip-off" by an Insurance Corporation of B.C. claims adjuster in Victoria will be made public next week, a corporation spokesman said today.

Bob Egby said trouble-shooter Jack Sealing, manager of the material damage section in Vancouver, carried out an investigation Thursday into complaints by Karen Lennox and Ian Gilchrist of Sooke that an adjuster had tried to cheat them on a claims settlement.

Egby declined to comment. "These are very grave charges. We'll have to wait until the report is completed before we can say more."

He said, however, the adjuster has been permitted to remain on the job pending the outcome of the inquiry.

The claim involved Gilchrist's 1976 Ford truck which was extensively damaged in an accident in Sooke Sept. 29.

The couple said just hours after receiving a cheque for $3,400 they overheard the adjuster boast to a friend how he had "taken" Gilchrist for a set of expensive wheels.

They demanded a review and ICBC subsequently issued another claims cheque for $3,935.

Egby said the truck was written off and taken to the salvage yard on Dunford in Langford where it was picked up on tender for $900 by Jack Evans of Dun Here Auto Body, 2073 Amelia in Sidney.

Evans said Thursday he intends to spend about $2,500 to fix up the truck and then will sell it for $1,000 to $1,500.

Meanwhile, Dennis Cooke, NDP MLA for New Westminster and his party's ICBC critic, said today the incident points out a basic ESSENTIAL SERVICE ACT FOR SCHOOLS Strike Curbs Widening?

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Labor Minister Allan Williams tabled in the legislature today a bill that will not only end the labor dispute which has shut West Kootenay schools but could designate education as an essential service in B.C.

The legislation orders an end within 48 hours to the strike-lockout which has closed schools and Selkirk College in the West Kootenays.

But if the West Kootenay Schools Collective Bargaining Assistance Act passes in its present form, municipalities, regional districts, universities, colleges, vocational institutes and schools as far as they affect education could be added to the Essential Services Disputes Act.

Up until now, essential services have only been construed as those affecting life and limb situations involving police and fire departments.

Any move to broaden the legislation to include educational facilities is sure to cause a storm of controversy in the ranks of labor.

Williams said however that section may never be proclaimed.

He is currently awaiting a report from senior labor department officials who are investigating areas that should be included in essential services.

Williams said the inclusion of educational facilities as an essential service won't come about unless the report determines that such a move is necessary.

NDP leader Dave Barrett, however, said he is extremely concerned that the potential to expand the essential services legislation is included in the new bill.

Barrett said the NDP feels the government's move is the first step to imposing right-to-work conditions across the province.

He charged Premier Bill Bennett used the West Kootenay dispute as a cover to recall the legislature to enact "sledge-hammer legislation" that will be as effective as right-to-work legislation.

"What this really is, is the first step to destroying the collective bargaining pro-

NEXT DAY DELIVERY NOW DEAD LETTER

By RON CLINGEN
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — If not officially dead, the post office's assured next-day delivery service is definitely dying. Postmaster General Gilles Lamontagne admitted Thursday.

The minister told the Commons the program was indeed being phased out, although he insisted it had not been cancelled, after NDP Leader Ed Broadbent — armed with a copy of Thursday's Ottawa Journal — demanded an explanation.

Broadbent noted that the newspaper report said the assured 24-hour service was killed 18 months ago after officials realized it didn't work. But the public was never told.

"Due to volume and different matters, we know now that we cannot give the 24-hour service in all cases," Lamontagne said as he attempted to explain his department's action, or lack of action.

"Instead of lying to the community and the people, we say that we will pick it up. When we can and when we have priority, in many ways we can provide 24-hour delivery, but in certain circumstances we cannot."

Later Lamontagne said, "the program is not cancelled — it is just phasing out."

As opposition MPs jeered, the minister blurted, "Okay, it is."

... So Mail in Minutes

TORONTO (CP) — The world's first completely electronic mail service will be set up between Toronto and Montreal in February, Bell Canada and Ivor Kaye and Associates Inc. of Toronto announced Thursday.

The new system, Fascan, will be expanded to Vancouver, Calgary and Ottawa later.

For 98 cents a page, the system will guarantee transmission of a standard-sized letter within two hours. The express service, which sends a page in 15 minutes, will cost $1.35 a page. Overnight delivery will be 70 cents a page.

Eventually, agents will be placed in shopping malls and offices where letters can be collected or left for automatic transmission.

3 Killed In Blaze

Truck Wrecks Stores

Times News Services
MONTREAL — Three people died today as a row of shops and a rooming house were destroyed in the second five-alarm fire in the city's old quarter within 24 hours.

Police said the bodies were so badly burned that it was not even possible to tell right away if the victims were men or women.

Lucien Seguin, a fire department official, said the fire started on the ground floor and then spread upward to the rooming house and toward two adjacent buildings.

At least five persons, including one firefighter, were hospitalized for smoke inhalation as the blaze ripped through the area just three blocks away from Notre Dame church, scene of a fire Thursday that caused $2-million damage.

More than 150 firefighters with 25 trucks challenged freezing rain and thick smoke for nearly three hours before bringing the early-morning fire under control.

Two of the injured were found hanging from second-storey windows in an aborted attempt to escape the flames before they were rescued. Another two were saved from the ground floor.

Meanwhile, parish priests at Notre Dame say that an arsonist who tried five times to set fire to historic Notre Dame Church may have been responsible for starting a blaze early Thursday which caused more than $2 million damage to the 150-year-old landmark.

"This time he was successful," said Rev. Rene Mariner, assistant to the Notre Dame parish priest, although fire department officials caution that only a full investigation will conclusively determine the cause of the fire.

Firemen brought the swirling flames under control by mid-morning, saving the church's main structure and most of the parish's religious artifacts.

But an adjacent chapel built in 1890 was heavily damaged.

ST. GEORGES DE BEAUCE, Que. (CP) —

A man driving a heavy armored truck smashed through the walls of rows of shops "as though they were so much butter" and caused as much as $2 million damage in a wild 10-minute escapade, a store manager said.

The destruction took place before opening hours at the Carrefour St. Georges indoor shopping centre, completely demolishing about 25 shops and damaging a number of others, shopping centre manager Roger Bolduc said.

A man in his 20s is in custody.

"I can't imagine how it could have happened so quickly," Bolduc said.

"It was an army truck, about the size of a Brinks truck. I don't know how he got hold of it."

"He managed to avoid hitting any steel columns. That guy knew what he was doing."

Merchandise was destroyed, fixtures smashed and partitions reduced to rubble. Water pipes were broken and the sprinkler system was set off.

Bolduc said only two of the 70 stores in the shopping centre were open today.

And Now Kootenay Sasquatch

KASLO (CP) — Footprints 17 inches long suspected by local residents to be made by a Sasquatch have been found in dense brush near this West Kootenay village.

A plaster cast has been made of one of the footprints by Roy Green, 80, a long-term village mayor and alderman.

Local residents said the footprints are the first evidence of the legendary, ape-like creature to be found in the West Kootenay.

Both Green and Rex Alexander, 19, who discovered the prints, are convinced they are not a hoax.

"A creature made it," Green said Thursday. "There's no way I can see it is anything but authentic."

"There's no possibility of a hoax because it was in an area not subject to trespass. He (Alexander) came across it pretty much by accident."

Alexander was hunting deer earlier this week when he crossed a creek on an old log bridge and found the tracks in a heavily-wooded area.

'Healthy' for Youth to Chase Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Government employment policy was attacked in the Commons today following Employment Minister Bud Cullen's remark that it is "just too bloody bad" youth are being driven from their home towns in depressed regions to find jobs.

Deputy Prime Minister Allan MacEachen said it is not official government policy to encourage people to move out of economically depressed regions but he saw nothing wrong in youth moving for work.

"It's quite healthy that they travel for jobs," MacEachen said when James McGrath, Conservative social policy critic, asked if government is officially advising youth "to get the hell out and move."

McGrath referred to statements Cullen made Thursday at a Commons manpower committee meeting where Liberal MPs applauded when he said "I don't want to spoonfeed, to put a nipple in the mouth of the young people in this country."

Responding to New Democratic Party MPs who said new unemployment insurance legislation will drive even more youth from their home towns, Cullen said: "Isn't that just too bloody bad."

He said youth in regions such as Cape Breton Island, where jobs are scarce, should "broaden their horizons" and seek jobs in cities such as Toronto.

Cullen accused McGrath in the Commons of taking his remarks out of context and said he was pointing out that one of the strengths of the country is that people can move to get work.

The unemployment insurance legislation is tailored to make about 250,000 persons ineligible for benefits by mid-1981 to save the government about $1.5 billion. It also reduces benefits to all beneficiaries by about 10 per cent.

McGrath asked whether the people who won't qualify for benefits are expected to move to get jobs. With the 15 per cent unemployment rate among persons aged 15 to 24, he said "the young people of this country want to know."

MacEachen said it is desirable and healthy for youth to move but that "our purpose is to attempt to increase economic opportunities in the regions."

He challenged McGrath on grounds it is irregular for an MP to raise questions in the Commons that are based on proceedings in a Commons committee.

Channel Change Upsets CB Monitor

Impending changes in two-way radio regulations will make monitoring the citizens band more difficult, a Victoria operator believes.

Mike Woods, a regular monitor for Radio Emergency Teams (REACT), referred to a federal transport and communications directive which will end the use of Channel 9 for routine calls as of midnight Dec. 12. From then on, only bona fide emergency messages may be transmitted on that channel.

Woods said this means anyone anticipating a call from another operator will have to monitor a specified channel or all channels by means of a scanner, or else have two radios with one tuned to Channel 9 if constant surveillance of emergency calls is wanted.

The new regulation, approved Nov. 30 after a seminar in eastern Canada, follows the practice specified for American CB operators.

Woods said it was adopted because Channel 9 was overused in the east.

"But it worked fine on the west coast," he said.

Operators have always been able to get through to each other without interfering with the emergency role of Channel 9.

STOLEN SAFE BACK AFTER 20 YEARS

KITIMAT (CP) — A safe which was stolen 20 years ago has been found by a British Columbia Hydro worker putting up a power pole near here. Police said the safe had been taken from the Northern Docks and Warehouse Co. office in 1958. It contained about $800 and some company papers. When the safe was found Wednesday, the money was missing, but the papers were still inside.

Sex Crimes: 14 Years

BURNABY (CP) — Robert Donald Westover, 36, of Burnaby and a former resident of Terrace was sentenced to 14 years in prison Thursday for having sexual relations with a girl under the age of 14 and for gross indecency with a male. The offences occurred between 1968 and 1978. The Crown argued for a maximum 20-year term, saying Westover would be a danger to society.

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

A real estate survey shows Victoria utility bills are 30 per cent higher than those in Vancouver and 53 per cent more than in Calgary.

The national survey by Royal Trust, shows the annual utility bill for a typical modern three-bedroom home would be $790 in Victoria, $610 in Vancouver, $517 in Calgary, $531 in Edmonton and $625 in Regina.

The figures are for heating, appliances and lights but not including telephones.

Victoria's costs were the highest west of Winnipeg.

They were also higher than Toronto, which came in at $750.

The major cost factor in Victoria is the lack of natural gas, which is a comparatively cheap heating fuel.

Most Victorians use oil and in the typical house the annual heating bill is $373, according to the survey.

By contrast, a house of similar size and quality could be heated (by natural gas) for $269 a year in Vancouver, for $293 in Calgary and $296 in Edmonton.

Almost all new homes being built in Vancouver are heated with natural gas.

Victoria Labor Council president John Shields said the figures indicate Victoria should revive its campaign from the early 1970s for a natural gas pipeline to the Island.

He said a saving of more than $100 a year in heating bills for thousands of Victorians would make the investment worthwhile.

Shields said people who retire to Victoria must find the burden particularly onerous because they are not in a position to bargain for increases to meet the high cost of living here.

Natural gas and electricity is provided by B.C. Hydro, a Crown corporation, and the government has a responsibility to equalize the costs among all citizens.

Shields said he hopes the report will not upset Victoria's status as a good retirement centre.

But Don Fraser, manager of Royal Trust's Douglas St. real estate office, said people arriving from the Prairies are so grateful to be here and out of the cold weather they don't complain about the utility bills — although they notice the heating bill is higher.

The survey showed the following costs on an annual basis:

VICTORIA: Electricity (including some appliances) $261, water heating by oil $133, space heating by oil $373. Total $790.

VANCOUVER: Electricity $218, water heating by natural gas $93, space heating by natural gas $269. Total $610.

CALGARY: Electricity $168, water heating by gas $36, space heating by gas $293. Total $517.

REGINA: Electricity $206, water heating by gas $67, space heating by gas $352. Total $625.

WINNIPEG: Electricity $213, water heating by gas $122, space heating by gas $551. Total $886.

TORONTO: Electricity $171, water heating by gas $112, space heating by gas $415. Total $750.

MONTREAL: Electricity $179, water heating by electricity $145, space heating by oil $541. Total $868.

The survey was prepared by Royal Trust's senior investment analyst for utilities and transportation, John Hough of Montreal.

He said in an interview the numbers could be helpful for companies transferring employees to various cities who are trying to figure out how much to make in the way of an equalization payment.

Premium Prices Paid Here for Utilities

The figures also are helpful to the real estate arm of Royal Trust, he said.

"I got the numbers by phoning across Canada. In one month my phone bill was $490 for this project alone. And employees of Royal Trust in various cities provided additional information."

In each case the lowest cost system was used for comparison.

For example, the few Victoria houses using electricity (instead of an oil furnace) for heating could expect an annual bill of $338 on average, compared with $373 for oil.

Warming the water heater in Victoria costs $133 a year by oil and $189 by electricity.

The cost structure is similar for larger houses. For example, the utility bill for a modern four-bedroom home would be $1,011 in Victoria, $746 in Vancouver, $648 in Calgary and $992 in Toronto.

Telephone and cablevision costs are not included in any of the above figures.

Estimated annual telephone costs are $204 in Victoria, $226 in Vancouver, $355 in Calgary and $280 in Toronto.

Cablevision costs are $81 in Victoria, $87 in Vancouver, $111 in Calgary and $280 in Toronto.

Gasoline costs for all family cars total $741 in Victoria, $731 in Vancouver, $622 in Calgary and $736 in Toronto.

The survey showed Victoria runs second to Vancouver for the highest average temperature in Canada. The average day-night temperature (Celsius) is 9.6 in Victoria, 9.8 in Vancouver, 3.9 in Calgary and 7.5 in Toronto.

But in one sense Victoria is also the coldest in Canada. Hough computed the number of days major Canadian cities had temperatures lower than 18 degrees Celsius and Victoria led the list.

No Threat Seen From Minister By Region Head

Capital Regional District chairman Murray Glazier said today he sees no threat in Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm's desire to halt creeping powers of regional boards.

There may be movements elsewhere to increase regional authority, Glazier said, but in the CRD the only functions are those which have been assigned by the province or which local governments have asked the region to assume.

"Frankly, I read nothing unfavorable or threatening in the minister's statements," Glazier said.

"My personal approach is to restrict our approach to these assigned powers."

"Our district is a child of the province, and I learned long ago not to fight with my parents unless it's very, very serious."

"Creeping bureaucracy just doesn't apply here," he said.

Glazier claimed the CRD has a solid and competent staff and limited functions although different conditions may apply within B.C.'s 26 other regional districts.

"He's assumed his portfolio and made his remarks about regional districts (generally)," Glazier said.

"I don't take them as directed at the CRD."

Vander Zalm's said as municipal affairs minister he would be as tough on regional districts as he was on social assistance issues when he was human resources minister.

The minister rejected a recommendation contained in a current study of regional governments which advised broadening their autonomy and authority as a fourth level of government.

Vander Zalm said his duty is to reduce the quantity of government.

Glazier said he will wait until the minister makes more detailed comments on the report's 62 recommendations before giving his views as they relate to the CRD.

One subject on which the CRD and local governments seem in accord is urban transit.

Glazier said he has yet to be satisfied on three points: — Whether the CRD (and the Greater Vancouver Regional District) will be assigned to co-ordinate and operate transit.

— Whether it is necessary to appoint a board of transit commissioners, adding a further level of bureaucracy to the urban districts.

— Funding for transit operating subsidy, which the government intends to supply from a higher gasoline tax and a surcharge on Hydro bills.

Glazier said forecasts indicate the municipalities will have to dip into property taxes to make up deficits within three or four years.

Vander Zalm said he will be giving immediate attention to the recently created Urban Transit Authority, which comes under his jurisdiction, and will be talking to local elected people and officials to learn the strengths and weaknesses of the proposed handover.

He said he would be prepared to ask the government to revise its plans if necessary.

Glazier will be among Union of B.C. Municipalities executive scheduled to have a lengthy meeting with Vander Zalm on Tuesday.

Transit and the regional district review report will be among the items discussed.

Teachers' Arbitration To Open Wednesday

An arbitration panel selected by the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association (GVTA) and the school board to settle a contract dispute will meet next Wednesday and Thursday.

GVTA's representative on the panel is former NDP attorney-general Alex Macdonald. The board will be represented by Victoria lawyer J. Noel Paget.

Both representatives agreed on Vancouver lawyer Kenneth Brawner as chairman.

Contract talks ended Nov. 15 after a month of negotiations when the GVTA rejected a 6.8 per cent salary increase.

Negotiations between the board and teachers traditionally end in arbitration. Across B.C. this year, 48 of 75 school districts will go to arbitration to get new contracts with their boards.

In Greater Victoria, the arbitration meetings will be held at the district offices. A third meeting will be held Dec. 15 if necessary, a spokesman for the school board said today.

The arbitration award must be made by Dec. 31.

Heart Attacks Up

He said Thursday the 13-bed sub-critical heart ward was occupied by 19 patients that morning and still had 17 in the afternoon.

He said the overcrowding was the worst it has ever been in the ward.

Patients just out of the five-bed coronary intensive care section are held in the sub-critical ward.

The coronary intensive care section is used to care for only the most seriously ill patients.

Hear Joe and Dodge Taxes

Want to help get the Liberals out and reduce your income tax at the same time?

P.C. Canada, with headquarters at 900 West Pender in Vancouver, has come up with a gimmick which it hopes will achieve both purposes.

It's the $125-a-head dinner in honor of Tory leader Joe Clark at the Hotel Vancouver on Feb. 15.

Invitations are in the mail and are not restricted to the converted. One was received this week by long-time Liberal supporter Bette Botterell.

She said the invitation includes detailed instructions on how to claim $100 of the $125 dinner tab for income tax purposes, suggesting that if the $125 is paid before Dec. 31 the $100 can be claimed on this year's income tax.

What's the connection between red tape and black-top?

Whatever it is, it might explain the presence of Sam Bawlf, the newly-created minister of deregulation (oh that awful word!), among the government bigwigs attending next Monday's formal opening of the widened Trans-Canada Highway.

Bawlf, of course, is a Victoria MLA and it's therefore reasonable enough to assume he would be in on the self-congratulation ceremony.

But the press release from the premier's office refers to him specifically as "Deregulations Minister Sam Bawlf."

For those interested, the opening of the $9 million highway section between Harriet Road and the Thetis overpass takes place at 11 a.m. Monday at the overpass itself.

And afterwards Premier Bill Bennett and assorted cabinet ministers invite you all to join 'em in tea and buns in the senior citizens' activity centre at Colwood's Juan de Fuca recreation complex. Free buses will be laid on for the occasion.

In the publishing business mistakes are always in black and white for everyone to see. They're a hazard of the business, of course, and perhaps we shouldn't tempt fate by pointing out someone else's mistakes but the error in a recent Union of B.C. Municipalities newsletter is too good to pass up.

A letter from the UBCM states that a story on then municipal affairs minister Hugh Curtis, with respect to taxes and urban transit costs, got the wrong headline.

It should have been titled "Urban Transit" — not "Criminal Liability."

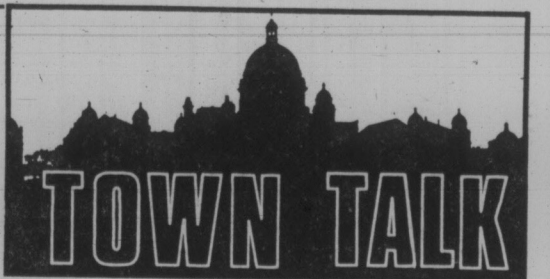

If you want to know if your Christmas parcel arrived at its destination, you can do so for 75 cents with the post office's certified mail.

Spokesman Buz Sawyer says the fairly-new but little-used certified mail is like registered mail and can be used on letters as well as parcels.

A form is attached to the letter or parcel and when it is delivered the recipient signs the form and the letter carrier returns it to the sender.

Controversial Canada Employment Centre manager Stan Purdy was honored at a gathering of his employees on his retirement Thursday night and he commented that one of the nice things about stepping down was that he would be able to pick up tonight's Victoria Times and not find his name in the paper anywhere.

Wanna bet, Stan?

So the big cabinet shuffle Monday was a big surprise, eh?

The official stance is that members of cabinet only got the word on the changes Sunday morning.

But Thursday the press gallery received a Christmas card from Jim Hewitt, who shifted from agriculture to energy, mines and petroleum resources.

The card simply said Seasons Greetings from Jim Hewitt, Minister, province of British Columbia.

Now surely there was no reason for Jim to have told his printers not to call him by his full title — minister of agriculture — when he ordered the cards a week or two ago, was there?

Well, Who Else?

Guess which Saanich alderman was seen a few days ago, blithely ignoring the traffic signs and doing a sharp U-turn around the newly-installed concrete median at the Bailey bridges on the Blanshard extension so that he could drive into the municipal hall grounds?

Here are some clues:

— He's a former member of the Saanich police board.

— In the past year he chaired council's bylaw enforcement committee.

— He recently admitted he was stopped twice for speeding on the same day.

— He's embroiled in a controversy over a certain illegal drainage project on municipal land.

Got it? Right. His name is Geoff Vantreight.

Rhoda Was Here!

The dock crew at the AirWest terminal in Inner Harbor nearly tripped over their gas hoses the other day when Valerie Harper hopped off an afternoon flight and flashed them a smile as she trotted up to a waiting car.

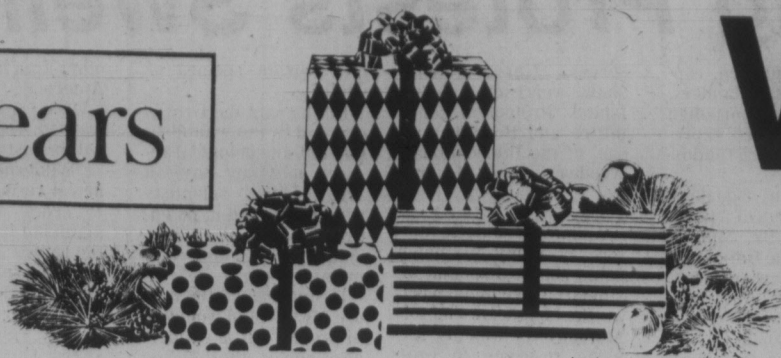

The next day the star of the just-cancelled television show, Rhoda, showed up for a return flight to Vancouver.

She didn't say much, AirWest Victoria manager Andy Glover said. She was just like any other passenger, only better looking than most.

No one knows why the actress dropped into Victoria for 24 hours.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE TRADING

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Continued gains in gold and building issues sent the Toronto stock market moderate higher Friday in active mid-afternoon trading.

Great Northern Financial Corp. was up five cents to $1.80 a share on the sale of 1.1 million shares following its resumption about 1 p.m. A half was issued at the opening for news that the company will sell its 25-per-cent working interest in a Provost gas unit and related properties at Hamilton Lake, Alta. to an undisclosed purchaser for $1.65 million.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market drifted lower today amid some evident uneasiness over the uncertain political situation in Iran.

Analysts said the market was jittery over the situation to the regime of the shah of Iran. Fears have been expressed that a change in Iran's leadership might pose a threat to Middle East stability and to supplies of oil from that region to the United States.

Anti-shah rioters burned down the Iranian headquarters of Grumman Corp.

Brokers did note some favorable domestic news in the Federal Reserve's report last Thursday that the basic measure of the money supply had declined for the third consecutive week.

The news kept alive hopes that the Fed's effort to control inflation and support the dollar by curbing monetary growth might at last be taking hold.

Texaco topped the active list, unchanged at $24 1/2. Volume was a modest 12.52 million shares as of mid-afternoon.

The NYSE's composite index dropped .26 to 54.01.

Sid Proves He's a Really Vicious One

NEW YORK (UPI) — British punk rocker Sid Vicious, who was charged with killing his girlfriend and later tried to kill himself, is back in jail on charges he slugged the brother of punk star Patti Smith at a New York disco.

Vicious, whose real name is John Simon Ritchie, had been free on $50,000 bail awaiting trial on charges he killed Nancy Spungen, his American girlfriend, with a hunting knife.

Vicious, lead guitarist for the now defunct Sex Pistols, was booked Thursday on assault charges for an incident police said occurred Wednesday at Hurrah's, a fashionable Manhattan discotheque.

Police said Vicious struck Todd Smith in the left eye with a beer mug about 1:30 a.m. after they argued. The wound required five stitches, police said.

Vicious' overtures to a female guitarist of a band called Skafish, which had just finished a set, were said to have annoyed Smith, causing the dispute.

When he was arrested Oct. 12, Vicious allegedly confessed to killing Miss Spungen.

If convicted of slaying

Miss Spungen, he faces a prison term of 15 years to life.
